William H., Aged Seventy
Happy Big Steel
How Far Yon Candle
A City on a Rock

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

IN seven days William Hohenzollern, once emperor, will be seventy. He looks well, but disillusioned, wears a full beard, mustaches no longer waxed or turned up at the point.

He will celebrate by publishing a book called "My Ancestors." It could be interesting, going back to the early money lending family of East Prussia that got its name from high interest rates. But it's hard to write impartially, about your own people.

William decided that some things were wrong in the Hohenzollern family and blames its troubles, passion, sudden rages, bad temper etc., on a woman, Maria Pawlowa, Russian by blood, Hohenzollern by accident of marriage. That reminds you of Adam blaming Eve.

William says Maria was "the villain of my family." His predecessor, Frederick the Great, would know better. Maria Pawlowa because she was wild, violent, ungovernable may have given Prussia's ruling family its genius.

Olympias dancing naked, with snakes wrapped around her body, too intimate by far with an Egyptian magician, conspiring to murder Phillip's second wife and her baby, was, nevertheless, mother of Alexander the Great.

It takes energy to produce energy. Sometimes ladies that seem wild simply lack an adequate outlet for superior powers.

It's too bad we know so little about violent women of the past, Dido, and Bertha of the big feet, Charlemagne's mother, the marvelous Hypatia, and Tomyris, the African queen that cut off the head of Cyrus and dipped it in a goatskin filled with human blood.

Men have written too much about themselves, not enough about women.

Ogden L. Mills, assistant secretary of the treasury, says the big steel company, which got an income tax refund of $15,000,000 in one year, paid in that same year $173,000,000 in taxes.

That interests "Big Steel" stockholders. It indicates that their property is well managed, profitable.

The New York Central Railroad, on its 35-story office building, installs a gigantic searchlight that will so shine, "in a naughty world" as to startle Shakespeare's little candle.

It will light up many inhabitants of "easy street," as it streams up and down Park ave. and over into Fifth ave.

"Big Steel" went up $21 a share last week, increasing the wealth of those that own it, by $14,700,000. And that was only one little item in the week's prosperity. If you have anything good, in the United States, hold on to it. If not, as the late Collis P. Huntington would say, GET something.

Some elderly New Yorkers worry about big buildings, convinced that "they must sooner or later cause Manhattan Island to sink."

It will comfort them to know that under New York there is solid rock going down 60 miles. All the tall buildings make about as much difference as a few pebbles on the Rock of Gibraltar.

Our earth dwelling is substantial. Prof. Michelson of Chicago University has proved that its rigidity, which means its resistance to any power that might pull it out of shape, is as great as though it were made of solid steel.

Michelson established the earth's rigidity by measuring the rise and fall of the tide in a pipe one inch in diameter and more than a mile long. Not everybody realizes that the tide rises and falls in your tea cup or in a canary bird's drinking vessel, just as it does in the ocean. Only the tide is not so high, or low.

Mr. Stewart, head of Standard Oil of Indiana, is making a hard fight against the Rockefeller effort to get rid of him.

Odds are against Mr. Stewart, for one reason. If he wins, as many in Wall Street predict that he will, his company will be "out of touch" with the other Standard Oil units.

That may be a disadvantage and big stockholders will think it over.

When little octopuses fall out, the one with three to one against it may suffer. Mr. Giannini, California financier whose Bancitaly company holds 10,000 of Standard Oil shares, votes his stock with the Rockefellers.

STATE BILL OPPOSED BY COUNCIL

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner and his assistant, Gerald J. Callahan, today questioned O. J. Brusse, treasurer of the Outdoor Recreation League, which expended a fund of $20,000 in the campaign to put over Sunday sports in Massachusetts.

Brusse's appearance at the State House had been long awaited by the State officials. Vice-President Charles F. Adams of the Boston Braves would, it was expected, be another questioned today, probably bringing the probe to an end.

Having admitted that he had uncovered apparent irregularities which might conflict with the Corrupt Practices law, Warner is expected to make a report to Dist. Atty. Foley relating to grand jury action.

"Fireworks" are due at a committee meeting at the State House tomorrow when Boston city councillors are expected to appear in opposition to bills for stripping the Opposition to a station at Charles and Cambridge sts. on the Cambridge tunnel line, until some new method has been found for financing such an improvement, was voiced at a legislative hearing today by H. Ware Barnum, general counsel for the "El" trustees. The cost of such a station, it was estimated, would reach $800,000.

BELIEVED DEATH VICTIM

This old photo, found in Nashua block, was identified today as that Mrs. Blanche M. Blackman by her husband.

WIFE OF GEN. EDWARDS ILL, MAY BE FLU VICTIM

Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards, wife of Gen. Edwards, former Yankee Division commander, is seriously ill at the Edwards estate, "Dunroving" in Westwood.

Attacked yesterday by what is believed to be influenza, her temperature rose to 103 today. Physicians are in attendance.

The illness of Mrs. Edwards halted a trip she had hoped to make to Boston today on important business, and may block a contemplated visit to California next week with the general.

War veterans in Boston and New England, especially disabled veterans now either in hospitals or at home, but unable to take employment, were grieved today to learn of her illness, inasmuch as Mrs. Edwards has been, perhaps, their best friend since the war.

Nearly two years ago, Mrs. Edwards was confined to the Edwards estate when she suffered a broken leg while playing with a pet dog on the grounds.

ONE HURT IN $30,000 BLAZE

One fireman was badly burned, three buildings in Lincoln sq. were destroyed, numerous people were forced to flee into the biting cold and damage estimated at $30,000 was caused by a general alarm fire in Weymouth Landing today.

Charles Foster, 35, of Vine st., Weymouth, a member of the fire department, was enveloped in flames when he attempted to extinguish the blaze which started from an explosion of a steam heater in the basement of Engine 3 fire station.

Rushing upstairs a mass of flame, Foster rolled through the door to the street, where he was found by Sergt. Ambrose Boyle of the Weymouth police department and taken to the Weymouth Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list.

A general alarm was sounded for the blaze, calling all the fire fighting apparatus in Weymouth, together with aid from Braintree. For a time it was feared that the

The Peace of Europe in No Way Promoted By the Kellogg Pact

THE reservations imposed upon the Kellogg personal promotion pact probably deprive it of its main menace to the United States but still do not render it in any sense of advantage to this country or of actual benefit to the [illegible]

The peace of Europe is in no way promoted by the pact. European nations do not take it seriously or regard it hopefully except as a promising opportunity for further exploitation of the United States.

The most eminent and outspoken statesmen in Europe, such as Lloyd George and Mussolini, have recently stated publicly that the nations of Europe, after signing the pact, have proceeded as vigorously as ever and even more vigorously than ever to prepare for war.

Mussolini said:

"The truth is that the whole world is again arming itself. The number of bayonets and cannon is constantly increasing, yet everybody speaks of peace."

Lloyd George said:

"This summer we signed a pact by which we outlawed war, hurling it into the bottomless pit of infamy. What need we do more but to sing the Hallelujah Chorus? Since we signed the Kellogg pact armaments have been steadily growing. As things are now the nations are headed straight for war.

And the readers of these papers all know from the provisions of the Anglo-French secret treaty, first published in

IDENTIFY SKELETON CASE GIRL

Nashua, N. H., Jan. 21—Through identification made today of a photograph police believe they have established the identity of the murdered girl, part of whose skeleton was found in the old Union Block, as Mrs. Blanche Mentor Blackman, who disappeared mysteriously about 25 years ago.

Identification of the picture was made by her husband, Rual Blackman, as the police began a search for the head of the girl in the hope that teeth would also be discovered, providing a positive clew to the victim.

The photograph, which showed a girl in the style of the early 1900's, was discovered under the attic floor where the one leg of the skeleton was found.

Other parts of the skeleton, consisting of a few small bones, were found today and the authorities believe that discovery of the entire skeleton is only a matter of time.

Blanche Blackman, police say, disappeared when she was 23 or 24 years old. She was employed at the Wingate Laundry at that time and the mystery caused considerable excitement.

A special officer was sent by Chief of Police Irving Goodwin to interview Blackman as soon as identification of the photograph was made, Blackman having sent word to the police that he recognized the published picture.

While there is nothing tangible as yet to warrant saying definitely that the photograph is a picture of the murder victim, the police feel certain, nevertheless, that such is the case, for it was evidently hidden along with the girl's body. A newspaper of 1902 was also found in the same place.

Blackman is understood to be at Pelham, N. H., where his brother, formerly of this city, is a dentist.

The pieces of bone found today

DIVORCED WIFE GLAD SHE IS FRIEND OF NO. 2

By RUTH MUGGLESBEE

A perfect understanding of men has Mrs. Lucetta Mabel St. Angelo, first wife of Dr. Joseph A. St. Angelo, of Hanover st. And a perfect disposition.

So perfect is her understanding that cheerfully she gave her husband to Mrs. Eva St. Angelo with the blessings, congratulations and wisdom of her experience with the man they both admire, but who is loved by the second spouse only. And now the three are living happily together.

Lucetta told Eva just what was what about Dr. St. Angelo. She extolled his virtues and simply attributed their marital rift to incompatibilities so common in marriage, but so profoundly inexplicable. And then she said to Eva:

"Take him. He is yours. Good luck. The better woman win!"

This she said when she was maid of honor at the wedding of the doctor and Eva a little over a year ago in New Hampshire.

And this she repeated today to a Boston Evening American reporter as between her and his new wife the doctor sat calmly smiling, nodding in assent to all that both women said about him.

"I had him for about a year," the first wife explained. "We were quite happy, but then things came about, you know, that cause a marital breach, but which when sifted down cannot be explained or pigeon-holed. We drifted apart. It seemed inevitable. And so I divorced the doctor, and went my way."

Here Dr. St. Angelo took up the story:

"Yes, Lucetta divorced me about five years ago. I settled $10,000 on her and she was agreeable to it. I was lonesome at the time, but made the best of things. And then

James Roosevelt Has Penumonia

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP)—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt, today lay ill in the executive mansion with pneumonia which developed in the right lower lobe after early symptoms of an attack of influenza.

The patient, since he returned to Albany from Harvard University Thursday last, has been under the surveillance of Dr. Mathias Nicoll, Jr., state commissioner of health. Dr. L. W. Gorham of Albany is attending him.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN SOUTH END DOORWAY

A woman, well dressed, was found dead, her skull fractured and her body huddled in a doorway of a building at Castle and Albion sts., South End, today.

Mystified by the case, police said they had two theories—one of murder, and one that the woman was the victim of a hit-and-run motorist who had struck, had carried the body from the street to the doorway, and had then fled.

Detectives from headquarters aided the patrolmen of the East Dedham st. station. Efforts were made to learn if any neighbors heard screams, or had seen any person in the vicinity, acting in suspicious manner.

One theory was that the woman might have been brought from some other district in an auto.

A canvass of houses was made to learn if any woman was missing from nearby homes.

MYSTERY MAY BE SOLVED

were three in number and apparently are parts of the other leg. They were found in debris which had been thrown down a chute to the cellar during razing operations.

The photograph found in the attic at first was believed to be one of a girl remembered only as "Boston Beauty," but she was eliminated.

Inspector Edward McCarthy is in charge of the hunt for the missing head and other undiscovered portions of the skeleton and this search is expected to take a day or two, because of the manner in which debris from the attic walls and flooring has been thrown around.

Another angle of the investigation is a checkup on occupants of the building over a long period of years, which may lead, not only to positive identification of the girl victim, but of the slayer, as well.

Because of the place where the leg was found the case was branded a murder mystery by the local authorities.

Within a short time the police uncovered clews tending to show that the victim was involved in the activities of white slavers. Other clews are believed to indicate that she was of French extraction.

Out of the debris piled high on the first floor of the partly torn down structure, the officers dug a book dealing with white slave traffic. This volume and the photograph are the only tangible bits of evidence now in the possession of the officers. They believe that both will be of invaluable aid in tracking down the person or persons responsible for the girl's death.

The victim, according to the police deductions, was about five feet six inches tall, weighed about 120 pounds, was of medium complexion, had dark brown hair, and a full face.

The police broadcast the description throughout the East and copies of the photograph found with the skeleton were being printed for distribution to cities and towns along the Atlantic seaboard.

REMOVING MENACE OF LIVE WIRES

General alarm fire at Weymouth Landing drove many from homes and destroyed three buildings. It started by the blowing up of a heater in the basement of Engine 3 house and one fireman was badly burned trying to extinguish it at the start.

EX-WIFE AND NO. 2 ARE GLAD THEY CAN BE PALS

I met Eva. Eva was interested in medical things. She is a nurse. So was Lucetta. Mutual friends introduced Eva and I guess it was love at first sight. At any rate I thought she was wonderful and told her so."

THEY ARE FRIENDLY.

The two women are extremely friendly, socially and professionally. They shop together. They go to the theater and entertainments together and enjoy similar likes.

"Eva and I were married more than a year ago in New Hampshire," Dr. St. Angelo said. "Her people live there and so we were married there. Just before our marriage my first wife came to us and told me she had heard of my approaching marriage. We understood each other, so that I asked her to be maid of honor and she was happy to do it.

"And then I brought Eva back to my home here in Hanover st. where I have a very lucrative practice, and we are so happy. About six months ago——"

And then the second wife, a little, dark-haired, dark-eyed, attractive girl, spoke up and said:

SECOND WIFE TALKS

"Let me tell it, Joseph. It was probably more than six months ago when his former wife came to us. She had been in Rhode Island with relatives, but wanted to return to Boston. And so she came to us. We were friends. She knew the doctor could use her in his practice, and when she suggested that she would like to work for him he was very willing. He pays her a salary and she occupies a room in our household."

The St. Angelo household is comprised of six rooms—three bedrooms, one occupied by each woman and the third by the doctor, a kitchen and two for the doctor's use.

The two women work with the doctor daily in his practice. Each wears the white uniform of her profession and each is distinctive in her own way.

The second wife, much younger than the first wife, is 24 years old.

HARMONIOUS TRIO.

It was "truth stranger than fiction" as the trio sat together around the kitchen table, with harmony the dominating note in a love triangle so peculiar as to be baffling to the best of psychologists and the kindred experts of the emotions.

"Are you jealous of me?" asked Eva of Lucetta. "No," said Lucetta. "He is yours. You are his. I gave him up to you willingly and I am happy that you are happy."

"And I am very fond of you," Lucetta, you know that," answered Eva.

"See?" asked the doctor. "It is possible when people are intelligent, for three persons to be sensible about marital affairs and be happy."

The first wife uses her maiden name, Lucetta Mason Glover.

There are no children born of either marriage.

Dr. St. Angelo is highly respected and loved by the people of the North End. He has worked for the poor gratis and given lavishly of his time and knowledge to those unable to come to him. The neighborhood has known him for many many years.

On the wall of his office a framed painting of a family coat of arms, which the doctor says is the symbol of the nobility of his people in Italy.

ROMANCE BORN ON HUB LINER, HERE TODAY

A friendship that began two [illegible] years ago when Leonard A. Shaw of Lakhimpur, India, Scotch soldier of fortune and adventurer, was introduced to Miss Constance Maplethorpe at her home in Quincy, England, blossomed into love when the couple met by accident aboard the Cunarder Lancastria and when the liner docked in East Boston today they announced their engagement.

Shaw is bound for New York to visit relatives there. His fiancee is going to Cleveland on a similar mission.

Three weeks from today they will meet in New York and will be quietly married there. Then, after a honeymoon tour of the United States, Canada and Mexico, they will journey to Shaw's present residence on the northeastern frontier of India.

Miss Deborah Garfunkle, pretty blonde German film star, was another to arrive on the Lancastria. She is bound for Hollywood and a movie contract.

Dr. C. Alfons Bacon and his bride, Dr. Catherine Bacon, honeymooners returning after a 13 months' tour of the world, embarked here and after a three-day visit with relatives will return to their home in Chicago.

While in Turkestan engaged in the building of a railroad for the Soviet government, William H. Smithurst, New York engineer, was introduced to Leon Trotsky, deposed Russian leader. Smithurst in returning after a nine months' stay there, Trotsky, he said, is an exile and is being closely guarded by the Russian secret police. The former leader spends much of his time in writing his memoirs and twice each week he must submit them to the police for examination.

Jenny Lind's Son, Goldschmidt, Dead

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—The death of Walter Otto Goldschmidt, 75, elder son of Jenny Lind, world-famous prima donna, was announced today from his home in Upper Norwood, a London suburb.

Mr. Goldschmidt was an accomplished pianist. His father, Otto Goldschmidt, was conductor of the Bach choir, with which Jenny Lind sang after her retirement from opera. The family home was at Malvern, where the "Swedish Nightingale" died and was buried.

FIREMAN BURNED AS FLAMES SWEEP WEYMOUTH LANDING

entire business section of Weymouth was doomed.

Capt. J. A. Bacon of the fire department had just gone home to breakfast, leaving Foster and Drive. Timothy Murphy asleep when the heater exploded. Both firemen were nearly thrown out of bed by the report, and without waiting to don clothing, Foster rushed into the cellar, where he found flames already raging.

In the meantime Murphy started the motor on the pumping apparatus and succeeded in driving it to safety just as Foster, in flames, raced up the stairs and into the street. The fire spread so rapidly that Murphy was unable to save a second piece of apparatus, used in fighting forest fires, and it was consumed in the firehouse.

MASS OF FLAMES.

Foster, who had a crippled leg, was a call fireman doing only house duty, one of his tasks consisting of taking care of the heater. Latest reports from the hospital said he probably would live.

Capt. Bacon, who hurried back to the fire house on hearing the alarm, ran inside and rescued a dog which was tied up. The animal was partly overcome by smoke but recovered on being taken into the open air.

In five minutes the engine house was a mass of flames, and the blaze was spreading to the Patrick Casey building on the east, and a three-story wooden structure on Broad st., the ground floor of which was occupied by a store, and the upper floors as a lodging house conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Murphy.

The lodgers had all been awakened and made their way to the street without difficulty, together with Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, who were able to save their valuables. The flames roared through the structure regardless of the efforts of the firemen and in a short time it was doomed.

FIRE SPREAD

In the same way the fire extended to the west, enveloping the Bates Building, with stores on the ground floor, and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bates on the second floor. This building was also destroyed, the inmates having escaped safely before the fire reached it.

By this time the firemen were beginning to gain control, and there being no wind to fan the flames, succeeded in subduing them after a hard battle. They were handicapped by live wires which stretched on poles in front of the firehouse and were burned through and dropped to the ground.

VISITED TWENTY-ONE COUNTRIES

TRAVELED 13 MONTHS

Dr. C. A. Bacon and his wife, Dr. Catherine Bacon, sailed on 14 ships during their tour which ended with their arrival in port on the S. S. Lancastria. Mrs. Bacon's father is Prof. Frank Lillie, head of the Woods Hole marine biological laboratory.

Science to Provide Limbs for Legless, One-Armed Child

Chicago, Jan. 21 (INS)—A baby girl, legless and with only one arm, will be entirely "remade" by modern science, Dr. Henry Bascom Thomas, professor of orthopedic surgery at the University of Illinois College of Medicine, announced today.

Two artificial legs and an artificial arm, equipped with wires attached to little loops of permanent skin, will permit the child to control muscles and actually walk, eat, write and perform other acts of a normal child, Dr. Thomas claimed.

Street cars were tied up for some time.

Dogs Save Tenants in South Boston Fire

After she was aroused today by her pet police dog in a smoke-filled house, Miss Rose Wells, living on the third floor of the block at Dorchester ave. and Dorchester st., South Boston, made her escape and later returned to rescue this dog and another.

Fire started on the second floor of the three-story wooden structure and, in addition to Miss Wells, drove out the families of Richard Wren and Andrew Grant, numbering 10 persons in all, from the adjoining block facing on Dorchester ave.

Pawing at her face and dragging the bed clothes from her, the police dog, "Major," awakened Miss Wells as smoke seeped into her apartment and as she fled to the street she took with her a smaller dog.

When she found that "Major" had not followed, she tried to reenter the block, but firemen prevented her. She then went through the adjoining house, over the roof and down into her rooms, from which she led out "Major" and a third dog.

The barking of a French poodle was the first warning that the Wren family had of the smoke that was entering their apartment, endangering them, while firemen aroused the Grant family and ordered them out.

Damage to the buildings was estimated at $2000, although the flames were confined chiefly to the walls and partitions on the second floor, where Dr. Clarence E. House, dentist, has his offices. The first floor is occupied by a drug store. The cause of the blaze was not determined.

$3500 Fire Loss at Theatre in Winthrop

Fire said to have been caused by an overheated stovepipe today caused damage estimated at $3500 in the Dream Theater, Shirley st., Winthrop, opposite the Winthrop Beach fire station.

The blaze started in the rear of the stage, and spread to the curtain, scenery and walls before being discovered by Manager Charles Clerk, the only person in the theater. He gave the alarm and the blaze was extinguished in a short time.

The building is a two and a half-story stucco theater, of which Charles L. Hatch is the owner.

WOMAN, 54, IS FOUND DEAD

At the same time, in order to leave no angle untouched, patrolmen checked up at garages, on autos, and garage owners and filling station men were asked to report at once any auto having a broken headlight or showing sign of having struck a person.

Police reports were gone over carefully to see if any complaint had been received from any part of Boston of a quarrel in a home or elsewhere.

The woman was about 54 years old and was clad in a black and brown dress, black shoes and stockings, and chinchilla coat with a fur collar and an orange colored shawl. She had medium gray hair and blue eyes.

rector of the food and drug division of the Department of Public Health, and Asst. Atty. Gen. F. Delano Putnam.

On Saturday Governor Frank G. Allen instructed Dr. Bigelow to make a thorough investigation of the charges, and if he found evidence supporting them, to take such steps as might be recommended by the attorney-general. The governor also instructed Dr. Bigelow to reorganize his department.

The police charged that on at least three occasions they lost cases in court because the state analysis of confiscated liquor showed it to be below the 2.75 per cent standard, while private tests proved the liquor to contain an illegal alcoholic content.

Governor Allen took a hand in the matter Saturday, after Dr. Bigelow had issued a statement to the press bearing on the charges. Following a conference with the governor, the health commissioner withdrew his statement.

Marshall Foch Is Gaining Steadily

Paris, Jan. 21 (AP)—Marshal Ferdinand Foch was so much better today that his doctors permitted him to get out of bed and sit in an armchair for a few minutes. He was also allowed to read some messages which have arrived from various parts of the world during the last week.

The ban on visitors to the sickroom, however, was not lifted by the doctors despite the marshal's requests to see General Weygand. The doctors said their patient's strength was increasing daily and his appetite was apparently growing with each successive meal.

Halt Trial of Texas Guinan and Others

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Norman J. Morrison, special assistant attorney general, today acknowledged there was no prospect in this district of convictions for conspiracy of proprietors and employes of night clubs and restaurants under a 3-year-old law.

A calendar of 30 indictments, including those against Texas Guinan and Helen Morgan, night club hostesses, was to have been called in district court, but all were put over after Morrison had told Judge Thomas that in three night club trials here juries had found the defendants not guilty.

AIR HERO WILL ATTEND RITES FOR MOTHER

Midland, Tex., Jan. 21.—A tragedy of death will halt the famous army monoplane Question Mar. here today on its transcontinental flight.

In order that the chief pilot, Captain Ira Eaker, who came into fame when the Question Mark set up its world's endurance record recently, may attend the funeral of his mother, the monoplane will stop over here for a day.

Just before hopping off from San Diego, Cal., Captain Eaker received a telegram announcing the death of his mother at Eden, Tex. A moment later the plane zoomed on its start, and was due here today from Tucson, Ariz.

Captain Eaker will go immediately from the local landing field to Eden, attend the funeral of his mother, and return here in time for a take-off eastward for Washington tomorrow in the Question Mark.

The plane and an accompanying refueling plane which served in the recent 150 hour sustained flight of the Question Mark in the vicinity of Los Angeles, reached Tucson, Ariz., after five hours of easy flight, and resumed its way toward this place today.

The refueling ship was scheduled to transfer 150 gallons of gasoline to the monoplane en route.

An early takeoff was planned in order that Capt. Eaker can reach Eden, 150 miles east of Midland, in time for the funeral. It is possible the refueling ship or another plane will be provided the army pilot for the trip otherwise he will go by automobile.

Three members of the conquering crew of five were aboard the ship when it left the coast. Another flew with the endurance plane's nurse ship, while the fifth was left behind, detailed to other work at San Diego.

The five men on the Question Mark's record flight were Maj. Carl Spatz, commanding officer; Capt. Eaker and Staff Sergt. Roy W. Hoos of the original crew, and H. J. Adamson, assistant to F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war, and official observer of the flight for the War Department.

BABE TOO DAZED BY TRAGEDY TO TALK OF PLANS

New York, Jan. 21 (INS)—[illegible] pearing broken-hearted and [illegible] dazed, Babe Ruth was back in New York city today, trying to pick up the threads of life dropped when he received the news of the tragic death of his wife.

The "big fellow" seemed totally at a loss to decide on plans for the future.

"How long are you going to remain here?" he was asked.

"I don't know."

"Are you going to take up your regular training?"

"I haven't made any definite plans," the Babe answered.

But he lost his apathy at the next question.

"Where is Dorothy?"

"Please don't ask about the kid," he exploded. "It's bad enough as it is."

The mystery of Dorothy's identity, whether the nine-year-old girl is their own or the adopted daughter of Ruth and his tragically burned wife, may be decided today, however, when Mrs. Ruth's will is to be filed in Supreme Court.

POLICE LOSE IN DEATH RACE

A police ambulance in a race with death early today following an accident on Blue Hill ave., near Babson st., Mattapan, where Newton P. Golding, 46, of 234 West Newton st., was fatally injured by an automobile.

Gerard V. Hannon of Broadway, South Boston, driver of the auto, was arrested and later arraigned in Dorchester district court, charged with manslaughter and driving to endanger. He was held in $1000 by Judge Joseph R. Churchill.

The victim, according to the police report, was crossing Blue Hill ave. toward the Boston Elevated reservation near Babson st. when he was struck. The auto passed him several feet along the pavement.

The ambulance of the Morton st. police station was summoned and rushed the man to the City Hospital, but Golding died on the way.

Golding was employed by the Elevated as a motorman, running out of Division 2, Mattapan, and was off duty at the time of the accident.

Girl Flier Hops for New York From Hub

Miss Ruth Nichols, 18-year-old New York aviatrix, who visited friends in Boston over the week-end, took off from the Boston Airport today in a biplane for Hartford with Capt. Harry Lyon of Southern Cross fame in the forward cockpit.

Miss Nichols, who holds a transport pilot's license, will go to Curtiss Field with Capt. Lyon as passenger. Having business in New York, Lyon seized the opportunity to fly over.

Dorchester Man Beaten and Shot

Michael J. Hayes, 45, of Hendry st., Dorchester, was beaten over the head and shot in the left leg early today, when he became involved in an altercation with a Chinese in a Hudson st. (Chinatown) restaurant-cabaret. Hayes' alleged assailant, Frank A. Lee of Batavia st., Back Bay, was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to kill. Hayes was treated at the City hospital and was allowed to go home.

High Court Will Pass on "Pocket Vetoes"

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Supreme Court today consented to pass on the validity of "pocket" vetoes by the President. Although the question reached the court in a case brought by the Okanogan, Colville and other Indians in Washington State, it is considered to be of importance also in determining the status of Muscle Shoals legislation which President Coolidge failed to sign after Congress adjourned its last session.

ACCOUNTING OF HUB SCORED BY G. G. A.

Failure to install a system of accounting for city finances is hit in the Good Government Association publication "Your Business," out today.

The issue comments that although the voters in 1922 voted to install the system, nothing as yet has been done about it.

The article in part follows:

"At the election in 1922, on the question, 'Shall the city petition for the installation of an accounting system by the Commonwealth?' 27,474 voted yes, and 14,430 no. In obedience to the mandate of the people, after a delay of many months, on Nov. 19, 1923, the City Council adopted an order requesting the Commonwealth to install an accounting system in Boston.

"But nothing definite has been done, except that some study has been made of the accounting systems of other large cities. Failure to act is not entirely the fault of the division of accounts, since it received as the result of the 1922 elections from other cities in Massachusetts, approximately 15[illegible] petitions for improved accounting systems. Many other cities have claimed priority over Boston.

"Nevertheless, Boston should not be made to wait five years for a system to account for millions of dollars, while small cities and towns are being taught how to account for thousands of dollars.

council of its power to grant Sunday baseball licenses.

Every member of the council has been formally notified of the hearing, which will be conducted by the House committee on legal affairs at 10:30 a. m. in Room 249 of the State House. Three bills are pending.

Interest in the baseball scandal was also directed toward the meeting of the City Council, storm center of the controversy, which was to meet today in the hope of electing a president. There have already been two meetings since the new year, but no decision has been reached. The balloting will be a real test of the strength of the administration and anti-administration forces.

Councillor William G. Lynch of South Boston, the accused in the recent baseball hearings, is said to be the candidate of the anti-administration unit, while Councilor John I. Fitzgerald of the West End is said to be favored by Mayor Nichols. The dark horses are Councilors Henry Parkman and Robert Gardiner Wilson. Councilor Gallagher of Brighton is also considered a possible choice if the attempt to elect Fitzgerald fails.

This afternoon at the meeting of the Council the petition from the Braves and the Red Sox for Sunday baseball licenses are expected to come up for action.

FATAL SHOTS SENT THROUGH WALL OF HOME

Westerly, R. I., Jan. 21 (AP)—A charge fired from a shotgun killed Santo Gaccione, 34, as he was sleeping early today.

The death-dealing load was fired through clapboards beneath the window near where Gaccione slept on the second floor. Louis Gingerilla, who is said to have had an argument with Gaccione late last night, was arrested by police soon after the killing.

It is believed by police that Gingerilla went back to the home of Gaccione, where the two, with Gracoma Groccia, had an argument over a young girl who recently arrived here from Italy. Armed with the shotgun Gingerilla stood on a stone wall outside the home, at 2 o'clock, and fired, the bullet penetrating through the side of the house before lodging in Gaccione's right kidney.

His wife, who was asleep in the same room, awoke at the sound of the report of the gun and found her husband mortally wounded.

Police traced the shooting to Gingerilla, who was found at his home nearby. Two calibres of shotgun shots were in his pockets. He was brought to ploice headquarters and there admitted that he had had a row.

Gaccione, who was married and has five children, lived at No. 4 Marion st.

Maud Jeffries Is Auto Crash Victim

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—A dispatch to the London Evening News from Sydney, New South Wales, said that the retired American actress, Maud Jeffries, now Mrs. Osborne, wife of an Australian wool dealer, was seriously injured in an automobile collision near Narooma, South Wales.

Maud Jeffries, born in Missippi, made her first appearance on the stage at Day's theater, New York, in 1888. She made her first appearance on the London stage in 1890 as Lydia in "The People's Idol." Subsequently she played leading roles with Wilson Barrett in England and Australia.

Prices Advanced in Gasoline War

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Warner Quinlan Co., which recently slashed the price of high compression gasoline 7 cents a gallon to 14 cents in the New York metropolitan area, today marked up the price to 19 cents. The cut followed to 2-cent reduction to 19 cents by the Municipal Service Corporation, operating a competitive chain.

The municipal stations today posted a 1-cent rise in the price of regular gasoline to 16 cents a gallon. Warner Quinlan also resumed sale of regular gasoline, recently discontinued, at 16 cents a gallon, 2 cents under the former price.

Mrs. Mary C. Knipe of Malden at Rest

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary C. Knipe, Mountain ave., Malden, were held today at the Sacred Heart Church. A requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Riley of the Sacred Heart Church. Burial was at St. Joseph's Cemetary in Newton.

Mrs. Knipe was for 40 years a resident of Malden. She is survyed by her husband, Arthur Knipe, and a son, Lester, and two daughters, Mildren and Gladys Knipe.

Influenza Much Milder This Year Than In 1918

But Vicks Laboratories Again Operating Night and Day to Supply Record-Making Demand.

Although the type of flu this year is not so serious as in 1918, health authorities are urging everybody to treat even the slightest cold at the start, as colds lower the resistance and make the body an easy prey to bronchitis or pneumonia.

An interesting response to this warning has been the phenomenal call for Vicks VapoRub, the external treatment which proved so helpful in the 1918 epidemic.

In spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks laboratories are once more operating all night long and are now producing 375,000 jars daily. A substantial part of this increase is attributed to the widespread use of Vicks as a preventive.

$147 STOLEN IN CHAIN STORE HOLDUP

Two minutes after he opened shop today for business, David Perlmutter of Callander st., Dorchester, manager of a chain store in Talbot ave., was held up and robbed by two men, he reported to police.

The holdup men stole a bag containing $147, which Perlmutter had brought to the store with him, to be used as change.

According to the manager, he was just removing his overcoat in the rear of the store when the two men walked in. One seized him and forced him back against the wall.

The other man quickly went through Perlmutter's overcoat and found the money bag. Then they both darted out of the store. Perlmutter described both men as 25 to 30 years old.

MIX KEROSENE WITH MILK IN CHICAGO STRIKE

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP)—City health authorities today demanded a grand jury investigation of the "dairymen's strike" that menaces Chicago's milk supply.

There were several reports of violence by armed men; of the dumping of thousands of pounds of milk, and of the mixing of kerosene with milk. Dr. Arnold Kegel, Chicago health commissioner, has asked the state's attorney's office to institute grand jury action against leaders of the striking milk farmers said they would welcome it.

The Chicago milk supply yesterday was 600,000 quarts under normal, yet distributors said they had been able to supply all demands.

Almost the entire supply of one large dealer was found polluted with kerosene. This was blamed by distributors on the strikers, who are demanding $2.85 a hundredweight, instead of the $2.30 distributors are paying.

"Interference" at the Olympia

"Interference," Paramount's first all-talking film, is in the second week at the Washington St. Olympia and Fenway.

This tale of the scorns woman seeking by blackmail to ruin the life of her rival, and being opposed by a reformed roue, is acted by William Powell, Evelyn Brent, Clive Brook and Doris Kenyon.

Roy J. Pomeroy directed the dialogue version, while Lothar Mendes was responsible for the silent version, along with photography.

On the same program, Eddie Cantor, assisted by Bobbe Arast, in a movietone skit; Ruth Etting Ziegfeld headliner, singing blue songs, and sound news make up the balance of the bill.

PRINCE CYRILL TOURS U. S. AS 'MR. SOKOLSKI'

New York, Jan. 21—Traveling incognito as "Mr. Cyrill Sokolski," Prince Cyrill of Bulgaria, son of the former King Ferdinand and brother of the present ruler, King Boris, has just arrived on his first visit to this country on the North German Lloyd liner Berlin.

Prince Cyrill, not yet 30, is tall and slender. He was dressed in a dark suit. He is accompanied by Professor Max Rabes of the University of Erlangen, in Bavaria, who is one of the best-known portrait painters in Europe.

Through the professor it was said for the prince, who speaks little English, that his visit here was no official character whatever. His time will be devoted to study of the country and its industries, particularly the automobile business, in which Prince Cyrill has an especial interest.

It was explained in a statement given to the press that it is a tradition with the royal family of Bulgaria that every prince make extended travels through foreign countries, studying the people and the general character of the countries.

Prince Cyrill intends to see Florida, the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone Park. Professor Rabes will accompany him during all of his travels.

Prince Cyrill is related to the royal families of Great Britain, Belgium and Denmark, and to the former imperial families of Germany and Austria, and is a direct descendant of Charlemagne.

His grandmother, Princess Clementine, was the daughter of King Louis Philippe of France. Besides his brother, King Boris, Prince Cyrill has two sisters, the Princess Eudoxin and the Princess Nadenschu, who is married to the Duke of Wurttemberg.

Graphologist Urges Girl to Be Nurse

By LOUISE RICE
Noted Graphologist

DEAR MISS RICE: I am a girl of 16 and I work in a laundry as a hand ironer. I do not intend to do this all my life. I am interested in music and in nursing.

MARY P., MALDEN.

I work in a laundry now to be sure I

I agree, May P., that you have a strong love of music, but I do not believe that your talent for it is enough to warrant your going through the many years of work and preparation which alone would bring you a professional career.

WISHES TO BE NURSE

Am besides, Mary, my dear, sixteen is late for the beginning of a musical career. The young people who are going to have musical careers usually have had at least several professional appearances by the time they are your age, and have many years of training behind them.

The matter of nursing is a different story. You are even a little too young to start your training for that profession, but you can start right away to prepare yourself for the work.

Are you sure that your education is sufficient for the entrance requirements of the nursing schools? Better find out about this right away and if not, you have time in which to go to night school and to get what is needed.

It is not too soon to begin reading along lines which will assist you. Go to the public library and look under the headings of "Health," "Hygiene" and things of that sort, until you have a general knowledge of diet for the sick and well, and of the various ways in which the health of the public is safeguarded.

MAKES SUGGESTION

Go to a nurses school, see the supervisor, make your statement about wanting to be a nurse and see if you cannot get into the laundry of the institution while you prepare to take your training. This would put you in touch with the people who will make your career.

Good luck to your pluck, Mary.

Dearest Anne:

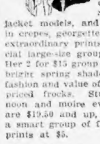

To "Clinch" the Sale

that celebrates the 6th Anniversary of Evelyn's Dress Shop, 8 Winter st., Miss Evely. is giving us another opportunity of buying two of her marvelous dresses for the price of one. Her 2 for $25 group is positively the last breath in style and quality. Showing some jacket models, and fully styles in crepes, georgettes, satins, and extraordinary prints, with a special large-size group for women. Her 2 for $15 group of prints and bright spring shades defies the fashion and value of much higher priced frocks. Stunning afternoon and moire evening gowns are $19.50 and up, and there is a smart group of flat crepe and prints at $5.

My Stocking Worries

are over, says Louise, "since I learned about the Children's Hosiery Dept. in the Avon St. store of the Touraine Glove Co. Really, I have never seen such values! I dropped in there today and bought Danny some of the best looking socks for school. They are the ¾ length—a mixture of cotton and wool, and just the desired weight for health and warmth. They are exceptionally fine quality—have a smartly striped turndown cuff and come in gray and camel-color and are priced at only 45 cents a pair, or 3 for $1.25. And those cotton jacquard socks and long stockings at only 15 cents! Where could you duplicate them at such a low price?

Is Your Hat

in step with style? That is, has it that fascinating little touch of angora that a bat really must have to be up-to-the-minute? Jean wore a most fetching little brown felt last night. It's rakish flare-back brim was embroidered in soft tan angora, outlined with petaline straw and really you have no idea how becoming the fluff of angora was about her face. I would never have believed that it cost only $2.50, except that she told me she bought it in Tuttle's, where I know they have such wonderful values. Hats in all colors and headsizes—for either the bobbed or unbobbed, are priced from $1.98 up at Tuttle's, 53 Summer St.

Only a Few Days Left

Anne, to take advantage of Thresher's Biz Clearance Sale. And what a sale! All their glorious, lustrous silks have been marked way down. Let's just look at their prints—crepes, radiums and satin crepes in all the new spring patterns. Regular $2.85 quality only $1.78. Gleaming satin crepes, $2.35 quality, reduced to $1.68. Rich, firmly-woven flat crepes, formerly $2.50, are extraordinary values at $1.88 a yard. And my dear, wait till you see the all-silk velvets—special for this week at only $3.88! They include prints, brocades, and plain silk velvets amazingly reduced at Thresher Bros., 19 Temple Place.

A Flash on the Silvery Sheen

—the cold clank o' steel ringing through the frosty air—and a gay young skater whizzes by! Flying few in flaunting socks the brightest dash of color on the icy-blue.

I stopped for a minute to watch the skaters in the Gardens, Anne—and all these vibrant young athletes are wearing woolen socks! The brightest-hued woolen socks you ever hoped to see. And what a smart idea—for not only do they lend warmth to your sports costume—but cozy comfort to your toes! I am sure Filene's is responsible for this delightful and most practical vogue, because they have made a specialty of all-wool socks at only $1.00. These woolen socks with turn-down cuff of brushed wool, with a stripe of white, come in the most daring colors—Jockey Red, Cardinal, Copen, Navy and Green. Another style, with long cuff made especially for Filene's, is the most practical, because the long cuff when folded protects the legs with wooly warmth 'way up to the knees. This style in camel's hair color, with vivid cuffs, is priced $1.50. So if you are going in for winter sports, Anne, better visit Filene's stocking section (first floor) and invest in some of these all-wool socks.

A Sale That Comes but Once a Year

must surely be worth while, Anne! At Scott's one and only Mark Down Fur sale of the year you can save from $50 to $200 on their dependable fur coats while, at the same time, having the advantage of their three renowned purchasing plans. You may open a $5, 60, 90-day charge account, you may join Scott's Unique Fur Club and enjoy small weekly or monthly payments, or if you prefer, you may pay cash. Scott's, whose fair dealing and liberal terms have won them the reputation of the largest Fur Establishment in New England, makes no extra carrying charges of any kind, no matter which plan you may choose, for the payment of your coat. There are no delays, inconveniences, or investigations at Scott's, and their luxurious, smartly styled coats are priced $75, $95, $125, $145 and $195 and up, according to the fur. They will accept your old fur coat as deposit on a new one, and make you a good allowance, too. Scott Furrier's, Inc., sell dependable furs only, and are located at 89 Summer St., Boston and 51 Pratt St., Hartford. They remain open every evening until 9 p. m.

Winter Steps Out of Her Somber Hues

Into the gayest of prints! As I descended the Golden Stairway into the Spanish Galleries of Chandler & Co. today, Anne, I stopped for a moment to snatch a breath, for the Galleries have surely become one of the brightest spots in town—and the Misses' Dress Section is fairly glowing with all the cheeriest new printed dresses and high Spring shades, priced at only $15. This season colors are going to be more daring than ever. And since tulips are the first sign of Spring, there are some stunning Tulip Prints fashioned in the most engaging styles. I have sketched the one I particularly want you to see. It has a clever circular insert at one side, and the all-important bow sash. A most tricksy collar becomes either a bertha or scarf at the wearer's will. There are vivid Harlequin Prints, Handkerchief, and neat Blocks in the richest of hues, some new detail that marks the Spanish Galleries that I first saw the smart new "Brass" shade, which New York stylists are talking so much about. This "Brass" color looks like dull gold, and a particularly smart model with "Brass" colored blouse has a harmonizing skirt of brown. There are many other models in black, tan, green, blue and red in the richest of silk crepe, all distinctive values at $15.00.

"The Brightest Light has no terrors for me now, nor has the closest scrutiny," says Kathie, "and I'm so proud of my unblemished skin! You know how terribly self-conscious I was of that disturbing growth of superfluous hair around my lips and under my chin. Now all that uneasiness is gone, because I have been to visit Miss Elizabeth G. Sparkes, Room 602, 120 Tremont St., and she has removed forever that unlovely growth." Miss Sparkes is one of the best in her line, and treatment under her sure, steady hands is absolutely painless. She also removes superfluous hair from the legs and arms, and she'll be glad to discuss your case with you, if you drop in and see her, or call Han. 7592.

The Demand for Youth makes hair dyeing an absolute necessity, for a young appearance is quite essential in the business world these days. Marion, who always feared hair-dyes, marvels at the wonderful results obtained by Hough ton & Dutton's Beauty Parlor in the use of Inecto Nolox—the most scientific hair-dye, which colors the inner thread of the hair, leaving the surface gleaming with its own natural sheen. Why not drop in there and talk over your own case? They are also offering some exceptional bargains in excellent quality transformations and switches, brown and mixed gray. Formerly priced $15, they are now reduced to $5.49—almost half price.

Have You Fussy Feet?

Hard to fit, and tender? Do they call for the greatest care in selecting comfort-giving shoes? If so, Jordan Marsh Company is offering a special value just for you. In their Modern Shoe Shop 4th floor they are having a special sale of the famous Arrolene shoes, specially priced at $7.45. This is truly an outstanding value—as these arch-line shoes, exclusive with Jordan's, are so constructed as to give real foot comfort, proper arch support and correct enlarged joints, corns and callouses. They come in three distinctive styles, in suede, patent leather and kidskin. Why "pay the price" for comfort-giving shoes when Jordan's offer their famous make for $7.45?

Our Style-Loving

variety-craving Rita has been shopping in Hovey's and she is positively thrilled at the array of the latest creations she found on their "third floor for youth" at the breath-taking price of only $10.75! She says her budget can easily stand another frock or two at this low price. There are new springtime prints, gay georgettes and popular flat crepes, also effective combinations. Sleeve fashion lays special stress upon jackets this season, there are plenty of these, also some unusual scarf conceits. You'll find hundreds of adorable frocks for juniors and misses at C. F. Hovey's.

The Sweeping Lashes

that we have so longingly dreamed of are ours, Anne, for I have discovered a magical preparation for the eyelashes, which when lightly applied transforms them in light, silky fringes that lend sparkle to the brown eyes, and acclaimment to the azure-blue. This pure, indelible liquid will also cause eyebrows and lashes to grow again. It is "La Sourcilla," prepared by J. Lesquendieu, and sold exclusively by Meyer Jonasson Co. (Toilet Goods Dept.) price $1.50. Ombrette, an evening shadow prepared by Lesquendieu to elongate the eyes and, deepen the color, comes in three shades, brown, chatain and black, priced $1.00.

Were You One

of the lucky ones who bought an extra evening gown at the sale of slightly used gowns which Mendelsohn's Dress Shop, 59 Temple Place, held two weeks ago? If not, here is another chance, for two more groups are offered at $5 and 2 for $5. The $5 group includes several new party frocks, some with the evening dip, and rose shimmering beaded gowns. In the two for $5 group are taffetas, georgettes and straightline beaded models. Mendelsohn's also has some lovely brand-new bridal gowns for rent and for sale, also evening wraps, dancing frocks and twinkling cocktail jackets.

Devotedly yours,
Priscilla

Here Are the Details Of the W. R. Hearst $25,000 PRIZE OFFER For the Best Plan to Achieve Temperance

THE Hearst newspapers in the United States today announce to their twenty million readers the conditions and rules under which a prize of $25,000 will be awarded by Mr. William Randolph Hearst for the best temperance plan offered as a substitute for national prohibition.

The offer was made by Mr. Hearst on January 2 of this year and has already been widely discussed. Here, for the first time, appears a definite and complete statement of the plan upon which the prohibition prize contest will be conducted, with all the information necessary to those who will enter the competition.

The purpose of the contest is to obtain a practicable plan, as a substitute for prohibition, which will secure better actual temperance conditions, which will be more easily possible of enforcement by State and Federal authorities, which will offer less encouragement to crime and tend less to debauch the public service, and which will not so outrage and violate the fundamental rights and personal liberties of American citizens.

THE rules and conditions of the contest are simple and are as follows:

1—Every person is entitled to enter the contest, but no one person may submit more than one plan.

2—The practicable plan proposed as a substitute for prohibition must be set forth in an article containing not more than one thousand words.

3—This contest will close on April 30, 1929, and no plan which has not been mailed and postmarked on or before that date will be considered.

4—The articles submitted in the contest will be judged by a committee of eminent Americans, the personnel of the committee to be announced at a later date.

5—The full prize of $25,000 will be awarded to the contestant submitting the best plan as a practicable temperance substitute for Prohibition.

6—If other plans not awarded the first prize shall still be considered worthy of some compensation by the committee a second prize of $5000 and other prizes of $1000 each may be awarded.

7—Articles submitting a plan to be considered in this contest may be sent to the Temperance Contest Committee, care of the editor of any one of the following Hearst newspapers: Albany Times-Union, Atlanta Georgian, Baltimore News, Boston Evening American, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Detroit Times, Los Angeles Examiner, New York American, Omaha Bee-News, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Rochester Journal, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Syracuse Journal, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Washington Herald, Wisconsin News (Milwaukee).

IT will be noted in the announcement of this contest that the plan which is proposed as a substitute for Prohibition is not limited to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The entire subject of Governmental dealing with the use of alcoholic beverages is left open to the contestant.

However, it is specifically set forth that a practicable plan is desired. This means that any visionary or impracticable solution of the problem is not likely to score high in the contest.

A practicable substitute for Prohibition must deal necessarily with the facts and conditions existing in the United States today.

This is not a literary contest. It merely calls upon the citizens of a republic to exert their best thought upon one of the most important problems of national government before them. The plainest of citizens have often proved themselves the most astute statesmen.

The work of judging the enormous number of articles which will be submitted in a nation-wide contest for a prize of $25,000 promises to be tremendous. Purposely, however, no restrictions have been placed upon those entitled to be considered as contestants. Any person who reads and writes and thinks is qualified to enter.

The purpose of the contest is patriotic. It is not to set in motion merely a competition, but to secure for the public good a practicable plan that will prove of value in the development of better moral, social and political life in this country.

There must be, in the natural evolution of the human race and society, a better plan to advance temperance than that of prohibition, with its speakeasies, its poisons, its un-American espionage and its law defiance, even by those entrusted with the enforcement of the law.

The best and most practicable plan stated clearly in an article of one thousand words or less will be awarded the $25,000 offered by Mr. Hearst.

Mr. Hearst will not himself personally judge this contest. The decision will be in the hands of the committee to be announced at a later date.

The reason, however, for Mr. Hearst having offered this prize and the object that he had in mind in offering it are best expressed in his own words. His recent telegrams to Mr. Durant and Mr. Clapp, in which the proposal of the plan and the thoughts relating to it were first developed, are therefore herewith reproduced:

EDWIN J. CLAPP,

New York, N. Y.

We do not have to make the American people law-abiding. We only have to keep them law-abiding.

And the best way to keep them law-abiding is not to make laws which very large and reputable elements of the community consider unwise, unjust, un-American and in violation of their fundamental rights as free citizens.

I do not believe that prohibition ever will be or ever can be enforced, and I DO believe that, if a violent effort is made to enforce it during the next four years by the Republican Administration, the next President of the United States will be a Democrat.

Smith's candidacy proves nothing except that the people did not want SMITH.

Nor would the personal liberty issue have won in this campaign with any candidate.

But after four more years of snooping, spying, keyhole-peeping and interference with fundamental rights and liberties by fanatics and professional busybodies, the country will be ripe for a revolution against un-American conditions of this oppressive and offensive kind.

The opposition to prohibition is not merely by people who want to get drunk.

Prohibition is opposed by such temperance influences as the Church Temperance Society of the Episcopal Church and the Hearst newspapers—I modestly put the Church Temperance Society of the Episcopal Church first. The reason for this opposition is that prohibition is a failure as a temperance measure.

The more we try to enforce it, the greater failure it becomes as a temperance measure, because the only thing we can absolutely prevent traffic in is bulky drinkables like wines and beers; and these contain the least amount of alcohol, and are consequently the least harmful.

It never has been possible and never will be possible to prevent traffic in compact and concentrated alcoholic drinks; and even if the traffic could be interfered with, every man could make these in his own cellar if he should want to.

Furthermore, we must not make the mistake of thinking that the country is divided into two classes—drys, who want to make the country bone-dry, and wets, who want to make the country sousewet.

There is an enormous middle class, which probably is a majority class, who believe in temperance and believe in personal liberty, and realize that temperance can be secured without prohibition, and never can be secured with prohibition.

These people do not want to be ruled by the liquor interests, nor, on the other hand, by the bone-dry fanatics.

Sooner or later they are going to assert themselves, and, personally, I think it will be sooner.

Prohibition has been repudiated by every country which has ever tried it, primarily because it did not accomplish the thing it was supposed to accomplish, and, secondarily, because it became such an unpopular measure that no government could stand up under it, not even firmly entrenched monarchical governments.

Therefore, I think that in offering a prize on how best to enforce prohibition, Mr. Durant is really offering a prize on how best to put the Republican Party out of power.

And I think Mr. Pinchot has actually won the prize, because his plan, being the most un-American and the most obnoxious, will make the Republican Party more unpopular than any other plan which has been proposed.

I did not mean to say in my previous telegram that education would get the Eighteenth Amendment obeyed.

I meant to say that education would promote a desire for temperance; but any sincere and intelligent desire for temperance will undoubtedly mean the repeal or material modification of the Eighteenth Amendment.

I consider the Eighteenth Amendment not only the most flagrant violation of the basic American principle of personal liberty that has ever been imposed on the American public, but the most complete failure as a temperance measure that has ever been conceived and put into impractical operation.

Therefore, I would like to offer, and hereby do offer, a prize of twenty-five thousand dollars for the best plan to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and substitute in place of prohibition a more liberal and more American measure, which will secure for the public more genuine temperance, with less offensive interference with the fundamental rights and personal liberties of the citizen.

Telegram From W. R. Hearst in Reply to W. C. Durant

THURSDAY, JANUARY 3

W. C. Durant,
No. 250 West Fifty-seventh Street,
New York.

My Dear Mr. Durant: I received your telegram and enjoyed it. We are not so far apart as might seem at first glance.

At least we are not far apart in some phases of the problem we are discussing. You are in favor of temperance; so am I.

I do not know how long you have been interested in the temperance movement, and how and to what extent you have crusaded for temperance.

Unless you might say the same thing about me, let me hurry to state that I have been a crusader in the temperance movement for something over forty years; and I have printed an enormous number of editorials and cartoons attacking the saloon and the dispensation of hard liquors.

That these editorials were at least considered effective propaganda may be indicated by the fact that many of the temperance organizations of the country asked leave to distribute them and did distribute many of them widely.

Therefore, I can assume, I think, that we are both equally sincerely interested in the cause of temperance; and the only difference between us is a difference of opinion as to what is the best means of promoting that cause.

You apparently believe that prohibition is an intelligent and practicable effort to promote temperance. I do not believe that it is.

Our objective being the same—temperance or even total abstinence—our difference is merely one of method.

I admit that I never did believe that prohibition would be effective as a temperance measure, for the reason that from the first it seemed inevitable, considering the character of our people, that a campaign of force would not be as effective as a campaign of education.

As I said in a previous telegram, paraphrasing a familiar quotation, you can lead the American people to water, but you cannot MAKE them drink it.

Furthermore, my fight had been chiefly against hard liquors, and it seemed to me from the first that it would be easier for the law-defying element to deal illicitly in hard liquor than in the milder and bulkier form of alcoholic drinkables.

This opinion seems to have been borne out by the facts; and I think it can be truthfully said today that any man who wants a drink can get one; and about the only difference between the present conditions and the condition preceding prohibition is that a man who wants a mild drink is compelled to take a strong one; and a man who wants a good drink is compelled to take a bad one.

It is true that saloons have been closed, but saloons were being closed before prohibition was enacted, being closed through the education of the public, through a high rate of excise taxation, through local option and through direct legislation.

Since prohibition, for every saloon that has been closed there is either a still or a speakeasy or a bootlegger supplying the most vicious and injurious kind of liquor that it is possible to concoct or conceive of.

You ask is anybody in favor of the bootlegger and the speakeasy? The obvious answer is—

No, nobody is, except possibly the bootlegger and the proprietor of the speakeasy.

Some of the public are sincere enough and clear-thinking enough, however, to be opposed not only to the bootlegger and the speakeasy, but to the condition which creates the bootlegger and the speakeasy.

You ask if anyone is opposed to the Constitution and the law?

Nobody except the criminal class.

But some of the public are sufficiently intelligent to realize that, when supporting the Constitution as a whole, they are also supporting that clause of the Constitution which permits the modification by amendment of that document's provision; and that it is just as much within the rights and liberties of the people to take prohibition out of the Constitution as it was within their rights and liberties to put it in in order to see how it would operate.

You intimate that prohibition has not been given a sufficient trial or a sufficiently fair trial.

It has been tried for ten years.

And I think the facts will justify the statement that there are more bootleggers today than there ever have been during the past ten years of trial;

And that there are more speakeasies today than there ever have been during those ten years;

And that there is more hard liquor and bad liquor being distributed today than there ever has been during those ten years;

And that there are more criminals being created today by the liquor traffic than there ever has been during those ten years;

And that those criminals brought up and educated in law-defiance by the liquor traffic, have become defiant of all other laws and added menaces to society in many other fields of dishonest endeavor.

PROHIBITION HAS FINANCED THE UNDERWORLD.

There is no use preaching, as we all do, that "crime does not pay," when it so obviously does pay—and pays big enough dividends to provide for the creation and employment of gangs of gunmen and thugs and murderers and bootleggers and hi-jackers, many of whom have become rich and consequently almost respectable; and all of whom are as earnestly, if not as conscientiously, in favor of prohibition as you, sir, or any other of that measure's honest advocates.

You say that those who are in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment are willing to admit defeat.

Not at all.

They are only willing to admit FACTS, and to call for a more intelligent and more successful plan which will lead them more surely to VICTORY.

You imply that the Republican Party has just won its unprecedented political victory on the prohibition issue, and that the principal appeal of the Democratic candidate was his promise to use his high office to urge a relaxation of the liquor laws.

The Republican Party no more won a victory on the prohibition issue than the Prohibition Party ever won a victory on the prohibition issue.

My contention is, and was, during the whole campaign, in which I supported Mr. Hoover, that the liquor issue was not an issue at all in a Federal campaign, and that the President could do nothing to relax the liquor laws, and that Mr. Smith was making a false appeal which no intelligent voter should pay any attention to.

Charles Evans Hughes, formerly Supreme Court Justice of the United States, and fairly familiar with the laws of the land and the legitimate issues of the campaign, took the same view.

There were GENUINE issues in the last campaign—such as the maintenance of the high degree of prosperity which had prevailed under a Republican Administration—and the voters had sense enough to recognize them.

You say that out of ninety-six members of the Senate eighty are dry and that out of four hundred and thirty-five members of the House three hundred and twenty-nine are dry.

I would like to say, if it is not disrespectful, that many of them are dry intermittently as it were, on the installment plan, and that their highest point of desiccation is reached during or immediately preceding a political campaign.

However, that has only an indirect application to the merits of prohibition as a temperance measure.

I am against prohibition for the same reasons that the Church Temperance Society of the Episcopal Church stated that they were opposed to prohibition—because it has set the cause of temperance back twenty years;

Because it has substituted an ineffective campaign of force for an effective campaign of education;

Because it has replaced comparatively uninjurious light wines and beers with the worst kind of hard liquor and bad liquor;

Because it has increased drinking not only among men, but has extended drinking to women and even to children;

Because the most nearly universal Christmas presents displayed in the shops, the department stores, the drug stores, and practically in every emporium, during this Christmas season of good will to mankind, were the hip-flasks and cocktail shakers.

I am opposed to prohibition because it has created more and more skilful and more highly remunerated and more dangerous criminals;

And because it has corrupted our forces of law-enforcement, and to a certain degree even our judges;

And because it has made pretenders and falsifiers out of so many of our public officials.

I am opposed to prohibition because it has instituted in the Government un-American methods of spying and sneaking and snooping and keyhole-peeping.

And because prohibition fanatics, not content with that, are trying to have the Government go farther and institute a secret police system, and a system of repression and oppression almost equal to that which wrought the ruin of the Russian Government.

What has become of our cherished American freedom of action, our boasted American personal liberty?

All that we held dear in our political system, as well as our individual independence, has been sacrificed to a fetish.

Any sacrifice might be justified to further a great cause; but prohibition has not furthered the cause.

It has hindered the cause.

It has created intolerable criminal conditions and intolerable political conditions.

And it has done nothing after ten years' trial to advance the cause of temperance, in which you and I are both sincerely and deeply interested.

Therefore, I think the time has come to call for another plan, a better plan, a more practical plan, which WILL advance the cause of temperance, and will not merely promote crime, discredit law, demoralize the citizenship and prostitute the public service.

DOLLAR LINER UNDAMAGED IN CRASH ON REEF

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Dollar line was informed today that its liner President Garfield, which grounded on a coral reef in the Bahamas, was undamaged and that in all probability it could be refloated, pick up its passengers at Nassau, where they were taken by the rescue ship Pan America of the Munson line, and continue its journey around the world.

Capt. T. P. Quinn of the President Garfield informed the Dollar line that the water in the ballast tanks had been pumped out to lighten the ship and that anchors had been dropped to steady her against rolling in the swell. She was not taking any water, he said, which indicated that the hull had not been harmed.

The wrecking tug Warbler reached the scene at 8 o'clock this morning and as soon as barges and lighters proceeding to the reef arrived transfer of the 7000 tons of general cargo was to be begun. When this weight was removed it was believed the ship would float off the reef without assistance.

COUNTY OFFICER IS DEAD

Fairhaven, Jan. 21—John J. Bryant, for more than a quarter of a century county commissioner of Bristol County, and one of the most picturesque political figures in that section of the state, is dead at his home here of bronchial pneumonia.

John J. Bryant

Born in Brandon, County Cork, Ireland, March 1, 1850, he was brought to this country at the age of three, and at the age of nine went to work in a New Bedford mill. In the last year of the Civil War when he was 15, Bryant enlisted in the Army, and served for six years, in the South, on the Indian frontier and along the Pacific coast.

Noted Clubwoman Tells of Success

ARE you one of many women who feel "left out" of your club's activities—a little hurt that you are not getting any where?

This message is especially for you, and it comes straight from the heart of one who once felt the same way, though only for a little while.

She is that dynamic little woman whom New England clubwomen love to call "our own Grace Morrison Poole." She is known to women's clubs from the Atlantic to the Pacific as "everybody's friend." Her Silver tongue has become a power in the council of the General Federation.

How did she get that way?

Partly by being willing to work hard, but mostly by cultivating the art of friendship.

Grace M. Poole

She wasn't rich, or famous, or popular when she was elected to membership in the Brockton Woman's Club 25 years ago, after being on the waiting list for a long time.

"No one noticed me at first in that large club of 1200 members," Mrs. Poole said, just before giving her "Current Events" lecture before the Massapoag Club in South Boston, "and for a few meetings I felt a bit left out of its life, especially as I had so eagerly begged the president to give me any work at all to do when I wrote thanking her for the privilege of membership.

HER FIRST TASK

"But I felt that since the club had chosen me to be one of them that no introductions were necessary, so I spoke to everyone I saw, and soon made friends. I have always done that and never was rebuffed but once, on a train.

"I wanted most of all to get that broad view of life which is obtainable in no other organization in the world, for a woman's club is composed of all creeds, races and strata of respectable society—unlike our church, lodge or social clubs, where all think alike. So when I was asked to serve on a committee with a chairman whom I imagined I did not like, I served. I found her to be a rare and beautiful character, whose friendship is one of my greatest treasures today."

BECAME PRESIDENT

When they could find no one else who wanted to be corresponding secretary they gave that post to the little woman who felt that club membership entails an obligation to work.

She accepted her duties gladly and from then on her star began to rise. She became president of that club, served faithfully in several State federation offices before becoming president of that body and gaining general federation notice.

She is now first vice-president of the general federation and a successful well-paid lecturer, who spends four months studying social conditions abroad every year.

"Nothing pays bigger dividends in happiness or cash than friendship," Mrs. Poole says. "And money cannot buy the joy of the friendships I have found in club work."

COTTON MART CALLED STUPID AFFAIR

"Any attempt to discuss market prospects or draw deductions from this week's price movements would be a rather futile undertaking. The market has been a stupid affair, as it usually is when business is chiefly of local origin. Professionals, drawing conclusions from prevailing dullness, are practically unanimous in their bearish attitude. Inasmuch as these gentlemen perform a valuable service in providing stability to prices, one should not be too hypercritical regarding their immediate views. They turn quickly enough when the market itself places the facts before them," says Munds & Winslow's reports.

"The week's developments have been of minor importance. December consumption by American mills of 534,000 bales was below the same month last yar but nevertheless showed the same per diem rate which gave November a total of 610,000 bales.

"The first weevil hibernation report of the season was as illuminating as usual. It left the trade in complete obscurity regarding the possibilities of future damage from the pest. The Spanish moss tests represent a practically obsolete method of determining the outlook for weevil activity. In addition to this, the trade is not particularly concerned over hibernation. The survival and emergence are of major importance, and these factors will be determined by winter temperatures. After that, the question of spring and summer weather will decide whether weevil damage is to be light or devasting.

"We do not consider a discussion of new crop prospects as particularly timely for mid-January consideration except from the standpoint that the inroads made on reserves emphasize the necessity for a large crop next season. In this connection we take occasion to quote from the last market report of Professor John A. Todd, of Liverpool. He says

"'To return to the statistical position as a whole, it is quite clear that if things go on as they are doing, our estimate of the season's consumption of at least 15,000,000 bales is pretty safe. . . . With a succession of three seasons showing consumption of 15,777,000, 15,407,000, and say 15,000,000 bales, we cannot face with equanimity a series of crops which begins with 12,783,000 and say 14,250,000 bales. The question of what the 1929 crop is likely to be, therefore, becomes of the very first importance. It simply must be at least 15,000,000 if a further reduction of the carryover to danger point is to be avoided.'

"It is, of course, the privilege of any person with strongly speculative inclinations to attempt to discount the size of the new season's yield. There is plenty of talk about a monster acreage that will be abundantly fertilized and have the favoring influence of propitious weather. This state of mind finds expression in a disposition to wait until the market goes up and then sell new crop months 'for investment.' Time will prove whether either the dividends or yield return on this operation will be as lucrative as some expect.

"It is our belief that the market has certain problems that call for prior consideration. One relates to the basis on 'character' cotton which has been showing ominous firmness, with an army of shippers wondering about the profit likely to accrue from forward sales on which the basis has not been covered.

"The other relates to the outstanding trade short interest and the supply of contracts that may be available in the next two or three months to meet the imperative and inevitable demand arising from fixation necessities.

"When these two problems have been worked out, we think there will be abundant time to take account of acreage, fertilizer sales, and spring weather and give such appraisal as may be required to these factors and their influence on the outlook for the new crop.

"No one can tell how long the market may remain in its present state of irregularity, dullness, and lack of tendency. It is our opinion, however, that when the deadlock is broken the necessities of buyers will be more urgent than those of holders."

Plans Consolidation of Power Companies

A proposal to consolidate the power companies in northwestern New York around Niagara was announced when Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern Power Corporation called a meeting of stockholders for January 28 to vote upon the proposal.

The plans call for the consolidation of Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern Power Corporation; Lockport & Newfane Power & Water Supply Co.; Buffalo General Electric Co.; Niagara Electric Service Corporation; Niagara Falls Power Co.; Niagara, Lockport & Ontario Power Co., and the Tonawanda Power Co. into a single corporation under the name of Niagara Power Corporation.

Morgan in Utilities Early, Says Insull; Big Oil Event

By B. C. FORBES

NEW York, Jan. 21—Samuel Insull, the utility giant of Chicago and several surrounding states, sends this column interesting, inside facts about the late J. P. Morgan's very early connection with the electric light and power industry.

B. C. Forbes

Mr. Insull's statements are inspired by what appeared here the other day concerning J. P. Morgan & Co.'s public sponsorship, under its own name, of a utility enterprise. It was then explained that Morgan interests had been indirectly identified with the industry, but that this marked the firm's first direct launching of a utility company. Mr. Insull says:

"Dear Mr. Forbes:

"I read your article headed, 'Morgan Firm at Last in Utilities Field.' Instead of being last in the utilities field it was first.

"Messrs J. Pierpont Morgan, J. Hood Wright and E. P. Fabbri were the three leading partners of Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co. in 1881, and were largely interested in the Edison Electric Light Company, the company that owned the patents and supplied the money for Mr. Edison's early experiments; and they were largely instrumental in financing the original central station in New York which was built by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York.

"If my memory serves me correctly, the late Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan was the largest stockholder and was responsible for the early financing of the Edison Illuminating Company of Boston.

"If time and space permitted, I could tell a great many stories of the assistance rendered to the infant Edison Electric Light and Power industry and to Mr. Edison himself in the early 80's by the banking firm of Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co."

Very influential interests are organizing a gigantic company, or trust, to acquire oil stocks, and, on occasion, to take over blocks of stocks from going oil companies. I understand that only dividend-paying stocks are to be purchased.

Private reports have it that Arthur W. Cutten, W. C. Durant and their associates are heavily interested, and that Blair & Co. partners will be identified with the management. It is the firm conviction of those behind this ambitious new organization that good oil stocks will do better than any other group within the next few years. Insiders discourage the idea that fireworks in oil shares will be immediately witnessed. They are looking considerably ahead.

There are hints that Sinclair contemplates starting dividends, thus making it eligible for purchase, as certain influential financiers look very favorably upon this company's prospects.

Canada is watching the tariff deliberations in Washington very closely and critically. Dissatisfaction with America's tariff policy is rising. Sir Herbert Holt, at the annual meeting of the Royal Bank of Canada, pointed out that Canada is not only the best customer of the United States, but buys more from us than any other country. Canadians therefore feel that everything possible should be done to enable them to sell to us in return.

Big events are pending in the aircraft industry. National City Bank interests are unofficially behind a company that aspires to become the "General Motors of the air." This company, Boeing Air & Transport, has already acquired other allied concerns and, I understand, has still more ambitious acquisitions in mind. The founder W. E. Boeing, has built up a great reputation on the Pacific Coast—and also, it is declared, the most extensive commercial flying service in the country.

How rapidly flying has entered into everday American life is emphasized by what John N. Willys did this week. A fleet of more than 30 airplanes left Toledo carrying the biggest shipment of air mail in history—700,000 pieces of "Whippet" mail, weighing 30,000 pounds, routed to every state. The mail planes were accompanied by 20 army pursuit planes.

Mr. Willys feels that this demonstration should reassure the American people of what could be done should any great emergency or national crisis arise. Think of what the American Red Cross, for example, could accomplish by employing scores of airships should a terrible disaster befall.

We certainly are becoming airminded.

HOWLEY WHITE CO. LEASE NEW QUARTERS

The Howley White Co., Inc., sales service agents for numerous nationally known manufacturers, announced today the leasing of new quarters in the Consolidated Gas building, 100 Arlington st.

Distribution of merchandise through drug and department stores is the specialty of the firm. The corporation heads, J. T. Howley and F. White, are keen students of retail merchandising and are considered authorities in their field.

The Howley White Co. employs a large number of resident salesmen throughout New England. These men have all been trained under the personal direction of Howley and White.

The Howley White firm is the largest in New England in the drug and department store line. The company has recently been appointed New England representatives of the Zonite and Jarvex corporations.

NEW DODGE SIX IS PRAISED

The remarkable public reception accorded new Dodge sixes struck the public fancy to a record degree, Boston agents of the Dodge Brothers cars announced today.

According to the Henshaw Motor Co. of Boston, early reports show that the latest Dodge model has scored the greatest success in 15 years of the company's history.

Walter P. Chrysler, Dodge Brothers executive, who made the presentation, based his expectation of success on the Dodge Six style, beauty, comfort and performance, yet the interest that was manifested by the public exceeded his highest hopes.

The Boston Dodge dealers today called attention to outstanding points of superiority in the new six, among them being the mono-piece body, insuring strength and comfort; the narrow profile radiator; the chromium finish on exterior parts; dash button starter control; finger-thin steering wheel; luxurious upholstery; finely balanced seven-bearing crank shaft; rubber engine mounting; front and exhaust manifold; wide-faced transmission gear; Chrysler hydraulic brakes, and modern design.

The Henshaw Motor Co. has doubled its order for the new sixes and will keep its showroom open nights until further notice.

Farm Outlook Found Good

A report which will help farmers to organize their business on the probable domestic and foreign demand for farm products during the ensuing year will be prepared by agricultural economists in Washington this week.

Representatives of 45 State agricultural colleges and extension services will meet with economists of the United States Department of Agriculture, following which the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the department will issue on January 28 its annual agricultural outlook report covering each of the major agricultural products.

The State colleges will then prepare State and regional reports for their respective areas, the object of which is to help farmers to plan to balance production with the probable demand at harvest time.

"One of the difficulties with agriculture," according to Nils A. Olsen, chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, "has been the tendency to make plans on the basis of current market prices for farm products, instead of on the basis of the probably demand at harvest time.

"A world-wide system for gathering economic information pertaining to our agricultural products has been set up by the bureau, and a staff of foremost agricultural economists employed to interpret the facts for the benefit of American producers and consumers."

Favorable Result From Frood Mine

Results obtained by International Nickel Company of Canada from its Frood mine have far exceeded expectations, according to President R. C. Stanley.

Samples taken in cross-cut on the work accomplished to date show 100 feet averaging approximately 5 per cent copper-nickel at the 1200-foot level, 45 feet averaging approximately 6 per cent copper-nickel at the 1600-foot level, 72 feet averaging approximately 8 per cent copper-nickel at the 2400-foot level and 62 feet averaging approximately 22.5 per cent copper-nickel at the 3800-foot level, Mr. Stanley said.

Work has not progressed sufficiently to report exact tonnage, or accurate average metal contents, particularly precious metals he stated.

No Action on Paying by American Chain

For the second time in its history, and the first since 1921, the earnings of American China Co. have been unsatisfactory, W. B. Lasher, president, announced.

"It has, therefore," he said, "seemed advisable to the directors to conserve the cash assets of the company and take no action with respect to the dividend on the common stock of the company at the present time.

"While the audit is not complete, the earnings for the last six months will show better than those for the first half of 1928, and considerable more than make up the deficit, after bond interest, shown on June 30.

"The company is in a strong financial position both as to surplus and ratio of quick assets to current liabilities, which is better than five to one as of November 30, 1928."

OHIO EDISON Co. reports for 1928 net income of $717,859 against $645,116 in 1927.

PROFIT-TAKING ABSORBED IN WALL STREET

By W. S. COUSINS.

New York, Jan. 21—The first session of the new week found a good load of profit-taking selling orders on hand, particularly in the high-flying industrial stocks which led the brilliant upward procession last week.

Prices were irregular in the first hour, though the copper stocks and a few of the specialties were strong enough to continue the "January advance" into new high price levels.

United States Steel, which was the big spectacular ground-gainer last week, started today a point lower and was battered down 4½ points to below 184 in the first half-hour in an avalanche of speculative selling.

ANACONDA A LEADER.

American Can and Chrysler Motor, two of the bullish strongholds, lost 2¼ points each as selling orders heaped in faster than they could be taken care of. The rise in St. Joseph Lead and International Nickel was abruptly halted by a barrage of selling orders.

Anaconda Cupper, Kennecott and American Smelting displayed a strong tone. Anaconda started the week 2½ points higher on a block of 25,000 shares, and was easily the most aggressive leader of the buillish forces. Kennecott topped 158 in a buoyant upward move and Greene Cananea was in demand at higher prices.

The market wires sizzled with a heavy turnover of 821,000 shares in the first half-hour, which was at the rate of more than 8,000,000 shares for the full session. The big board was swayed backward and forward by successive waves of buying and selling, in which the professional and floor traders took a lively and active part.

RAILS WORK UPWARD.

The money rate was unchanged at 6 per cent. As this is one of the "easiest" periods of the year in the money market, it is not expected that the rate will go above 6 or 7 per cent this week. And it may be possible to borrow as low as 5 per cent in the outside market.

Business and industrial reports were mostly favorable, with steel mills maintaining their high operating rate, and retail merchandising on the increase in the centers of population.

The railroad stocks were led into slightly higher price levels by Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio, which sold up nearly 2 points on the average.

All of these stocks, with half a dozen more, are candidates for larger cash dividends this year. At 220 Chesapeake & Ohio was up over 3 points in active trading.

National Cash Register soared 4 points to 115¾ in the lead of the specialties, but an avalanche of selling orders forced this popular speculative favorite back to 111½. Radio dropped about 6 points and General Electric sold about a point lower.

Moderate recoveries were in order in the second hour, but the market on the whole was extremely irregular, with the bulls and bears evenly matched.

FLEISCHMANN SALES PARLEY

The annual sales meeting of the Fleischmann Company for the Boston district was held at the Brunswick Hotel with sales representatives present from New England cities. Guy Maynard, district manager, presided and gave an interesting account of the activities of the past year and predicted a big increase in 1929 sales. Corwin Wickersham, division manager, extended the greetings of the Fleischmann Company.

Other speakers were L. A. Kane, "Variety in Breads," and H. J. Schinkel, "Quality Bread." W. M. Wilshire gave an interesting talk on Foil Sales plans for the year 1929. W. E. Broeg, manager of the new Fleischmann Traveling School, gave an interesting talk on the school and its special service to bakers. J. V. Toland and W. J. Baiter also spoke.

A banquet followed the meeting with an attendance of 75 sales representatives.

1929 BUSINESS DEVELOPING

So far in the new year business has developed quite according to schedule. Steel operations have been stepped up to about 87 per cent with prices firm, and every indication that in accordance with the usual custom operations will tend to expand. A favorable decision on railroad valuations would have a very pronounced collateral effect on this as on many other industries. Automobile outlook which, as usual, had fallen to a low figure in the closing months of the previous year, though not as low as is generally the case, is back to about 65 per cent of capacity. Car loadings, which, however, represent business originated some weeks or months previous, show gains over the corresponding week of 1928 and 1927. The coal market is firm, and copper prices are well maintained, says Hayden, Stone & Co.

The foreign trade figures for 1928 furnish large totals. Exports of $5,129,132,000, and imports of $4,089,930,000, leave a net export balance of $1,039,202,000. All these figures surpass any previous year. The balance of over $1,000,000,000 would of itself suggest a difficulty in our foreign debtors—public or private—meeting their obligations, but the invisible items balanced the 1927 net exports, and probably this was also the case in 1928.

WALL STREET'S OUTLOOK

Woolworth "Melon"

REPORT persists that directors of F. W. Woolworth Company contemplate exceedingly favorable action in the near future, as a celebration of the company's long and brilliant record since its inception. One story is to the effect that the action may take the form of "the largest dividend ever declared by the company." A 100 per cent stock dividend, suggested by some, would meet this requirement. There may be some payment to stockholders of a stock interest in Woolworth's foreign subsidiaries, which have been growing rapidly.

Atlantic Refining

Position of Atlantic Refining takes on special interest in view of the understanding that it is one of the favored issues of the group which is forming the huge oil investment trust. Earnings of the company showed continued improvement throughout 1928, the first quarter net of $1,357,357 comparing with a $2,679,000 deficit in the same period a year previous; for the second quarter net increased to $4,332,000; the third quarter net was $6,219,000. For the nine months the per-share was $5.35. The final quarter will probably show earnings to bring the full year's net to $7.50, or $8 a share.

Erie's Earnings

Expectation is that Erie Railroad for December will show a most favorable increase in income as compared with the same month of 1927. The estimate is made in responsible circles that the net income for the full year 1928 will exceed $4.50 a share on the common stock. This would compare with 65 cents on the common the previous year.

N. Y. TRUST IN MOVE TO ADD TO STOCK

Stockholders of the New York Trust Company have just been notified that a special meeting will be held on February 14 to consider and act upon a 25 per cent increase in the authorized capital stock of the company.

It is proposed to offer 20,000 shares of the additional stock for subscription to stockholders of record on February 9 and to issue and sell the balance (5,000 shares) to trustees to be selected by the board for the benefit of officers and employes under revision of the company's profit-sharing plan. It is also proposed to reduce the par value of the company's stock from $100 to $25 per share and to issue four shares of the reduced par value for each outstanding share.

In a letter to stockholders from Mortimer N. Buckner, chairman of the board of trustees, and Harvey D. Gibson, president, of New York and North Conway, N. H., it is stated:

"Your board of trustees is unanimously of opinion that the interests of the company and its stockholders will best be served by an increase at this time of the capital stock from $10,000,000 to $12,500,000 (125,000 shares of the par value of $100 each), and recommends that 20,000 shares (of the par value of $100 each) of such increase of stockholders of record on a date to be hereafter fixed, at $300 per share, each stockholder to have the right to subscribe to one share for each five shares then held by him.

"Your board of trustees has unanimously recommended that 5000 shares (of the par value of $100 each) of such increase of stock be issued and sold at $300 per share to trustees to be selected by your board, and to be held by them for the benefit of officers and employes of the company as part of the profit-sharing policy of the company, under such plan and agreement and subject to such terms and conditions as may be determined by your board."

Gold Production in California Off

California produced $15,470,000 in gold, silver, copper and lead during 1928, according to an estimate by the U. S Bureau of Mines. This represents a decrease of $1,361,000, or 8 per cent, compared with the 1927 production. All metals showed decreases in quantities produced, but copper registered an increase in value.

Gold production was estimated at 524,300 fine ounces, valued at $10,838,000, as compared with 561,586 ounces, valued at $11,671,018, in 1927. Production from lode mines was maintained at a favorable rate as compared with 1927, due to intensive development.

INCITING TO SPECULATION FORBIDDEN

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

In this column last week we printed the surmise that Boston Stock Exchange members would not be allowed to follow the precedent set by State officials and make definite prediction of a price advance in any given security. Secretary George A. Rich of the Boston Stock Exchange tells me: "I may say that the general rule of the exchange as to members advertising is that the advertisement must be dignified and must not tend to incite people to speculation. This means that the advertisement must not be flippant, must not carry catch phrases and slogans, must not predict specific advances or declines in specific securities."

Effects of increasing concentration of business and industrial control, otherwise known as mergers, in our cities and towns is to be studied by a high-grade committee. Its makeup includes Paul D. Cravath, ex-chairman of Westinghouse Electric, as chairman, and Julius Rosenwald of Sears Roebuck, Walter S. Gifford of American Telephone, Felix Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and C. S. Woolworth of F. W. Woolworth Co. The results should be interesting.

The "cash and carry" system which was brought into widespread use by the emergencies of the World War has continued and is still established today. Nevertheless, a number of the New England "cash and carry" establishments, fighting for more business, now depart from the old rule and make deliveries for customers ordering quantities of goods sufficiently large to "make delivery pay."

The most notable evolution of 1929 to date in this line is that started among the mail order houses, of which National Bellas Hess, spectacular in its stock exchange career of late, led. This was the decision to "pay the postage." That's reminiscent of the old advertising slogan that built up a fortune—"Jones pays the freight."

Take notice of the great growth of investment trusts, forecast in this column when the first such trusts were formed right here in New England. They were, as is generally known, an American adaptation of an old British idea. American investment trusts have far outstripped the British in profits and progress.

Following is a list showing 22 investment trusts which have been organized or planned since last October. American International Corp., headed by Matthew C. STEEL ORDERS ARE HIGHER FOR MONTH

New orders of fabricated structural steel in December, as reported to the Department of Commerce by the principal fabricators, were 64 per cent of capacity, based on total orders of 198,445 tons reported by fabricators with a capacity of 308,485 tons per month, as against November orders of 63 per cent of capacity.

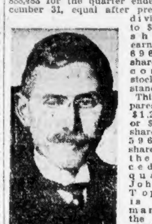

Shipments of fabricated structural steel in December represented 72 per cent of the capacity of firms reporting this item, as against 73 per cent in November and 63 per cent a year ago.

Total orders for the year 1928 were computed to be 3,287,600 tons or 71 per cent of capacity, as against 3,052,500 tons ordered in 1927 representing 68 per cent of capacity. Shipments in 1928 represented 67 per cent of shop capacity as against 63 per cent in 1927.

The capacity of fabricators of structural steel during 1928 is estimated at 385,000 tons per month, as against 375,000 tons in 1927, 360,000 tons in 1926, and 347,000 in 1925, based on actual reports by 431 firms with a capacity of 373,500 tons in 1928, and estimated capacities for other firms.

Republic Iron Net $4.25 on Common

Republic Iron & Steel Company, including the Trumbull Steel Company, reports a net profit of $1,888,483 for the quarter ended December 31, equal after preferred dividends, to $2.08 a share earned on 896,000 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with $1,280,775, or $1.41 a share on 596,030 shares, in the preceding quarter. John A. Topping is chairman of the board of the Republic Iron & Steel Company.

J. A. Topping

Net profit for the year 1928, as compiled from the company's quarterly statements, was $4,710,445, or $4.25 a share, as against $3,018,282, excluding Trumbull Steel, or $4.22 a share, for the preceding year.

Unfilled orders on December 31 totaled 405,929 tons, compared with 365,601 tons on September 30 and 140,809 tons on December 31, 1927.

CHAIN STORES SALES ARE GROWING

New sales records established by chain store systems in 1928 may be taken as an indication of the growing success of mass distribution, with consequent benefits to consumers and investors alike, according to L. L. Jay, president of the American Department Stores Corporation.

A study of the sales returns reported thus far by many of the larger chain systems, indicates that the 1928 total sales of chain store systems will be well in excess of $5,000,000,000, Mr. Jay points out.

"The average gain in sales volume in 1928 for chain stores was approximately 20 per cent and, if the chain stores are performing their function properly, and I believe they are, this increase must mean reduced operating costs and lower prices to the consumer.

"The average increase in earnings of the chain stores that have thus far made their reports, is approximately 15 per cent. This may be accepted as an indication of increased net profits, which in the case of department stores, are undoubtedly more adequate than they have been for several years.

"The bureau of business research of Harvard University in a survey of nearly 200 department stores in the United States determined that the net profit per dollar of sales in 1927 had dropped to 1.7 cents as compared with 3.4 cents in 1922. This return seems hardly adequate and I believe that the 1928 net profits will be nearer the 1922 level, due to the expansion of chain department stores with consequent economies.

"The American Department Stores' Corporation showed an increase of 41.7 per cent in sales in 1928 over 1927, and I am certain that the final analysis of our year's business will mean better service and lower prices for our trade and a net profit for the corporation above that of last year."

CAR LOADINGS OF CANADIAN NATIONAL UP

Complete reports for 1928 show that during the year 3,195,422 cars were loaded with revenue freight on the Canadian National Railways. This is an increase of 288,521 cars, or 9.9 per cent over the revenue car loadings of 2,906,901 for 1927.

Agriculture and industry both contributed to the increase which was general throughout the system. The greatest increase, however, was in the prairie provinces, where the record loadings of grain, consequent upon the year's harvest, were the greatest single contributing factor.

During the year trains were handled with greater expedition due to the augmented motive power of the Canadian National system. For four years the hauling capacity of freight locomotives has been steadily increased, making it possible to haul longer trains with no diminution in their speed.

The average daily number of cars available for service on the Canadian National Railways during the peak of traffic is placed at 135,000.

Mail Order House's Profits Gain 100%

Studebaker Mail Order Company reports profits for the first six months of the present fiscal year, ended September 30, 1928, were 100 per cent greater than for the same period of 1927. Profits for the second half of the year are expected to show an even greater gain due to the increased volume of sales and the Christmas season when the gift business on its watches, jewelry and specialty lines are exceptionally high.

The balance sheet at the close of the six months' period ended September 30, 1928, showed current assets of $2,690,884, of which $585,879 was cash, as against current liabilities of only $146,589, a ratio of over 17 to 1.

Trunz Pork Stores Net for Year Gains

Trunz Pork Stores, Inc., reports net profit of $254,058 for the year 1928 equal to $3.54 a share on the common, as against $196,399, or $1.96 a share, in 1927. Net sales for 1928 were $4,463,619 against $3,561,440 in the previous year. For the quarter ended Dec. 31, net profit was $106,657, or $1.06 a share. At the close of the year the company had 29 retail stores in operation.

FACTORY WORK SEEN IN VAN OF ADVANCE

Bradstreet's reports today that factory operations seem to have reassumed their late 1928 activities rather earlier than have wholesale or retail trade, which have had to contend with very sharp changes in weather conditions during the past two weeks, but all three send rather better reports than they did at this date one or two years ago.

In the lead are the iron, steel and related trades, with steel making easily first at a slight gain over recent weeks. In the steel trade, too, there are visible some contrasts as between the relatively rapid pace of output and the more deliberate advance of new buying. For this latter the slightly slower than expected advance in buying of automobile steel is held mainly responsible. That the automobile trade is active is, however, proved by the heavy outputs of new cars visible at leading centers.

FAIR PROGRESS

Wholesale trade has shown fair progress, with fill-in business naturally less marked than is spring buying, which has expanded, especially in shoes and some lines of textiles, the former as the result of "style shows" at eastern and western markets. It is possible that the more deliberate opening up of the dry goods trades is partly a result of weather conditions. More is doing, too, in furniture, although the pace of recovery is slower.

Retail trade, while reflecting the stimulus of "sales" has also felt the severe changes, with zero or sub-zero temperatures or the reverse, for which the past 10 days have been notable, as well as the relatively heavy precipitation of snow noted in the central west. In States like Iowa, Missouri and adjoining areas, advices are that country roads are very generally blocked with snow. Hence, while city buying of winter goods, rubber footwear and coal has expanded, the results the country over lack uniformity.

GRAINS STIFFEN

Among other items of interest coming to hand have been the general stiffening of prices of grain, this led by corn, which has made a new high for the season on drought damage reports from Argentina; assurance that the winter wheat crop has a rather widely distributed cover of snow, and more reports that holding of wheat continues to have an effect on trade and collections, this more especially in the northwest quarter of the country.

Among the other industries sending better reports are the north Pacific coast salmon canning business, which advises that four-fifths of that pack of 6,000,000 cases has already passed into consuming markets; the northwestern apple crop, which reports the largest exports, 3,000,000 boxes on record, and the coast citrus fruit industry, which notes a larger volume of shipments at prices fully equal to a year ago.

The lumber industry, which has not yet thrown off all of its year-end quiet, reports buying exceeding production. From the millinery trade come reports of quiet, and the jewelry trade at some eastern centers is still lagging.

December returns of cotton consumption point to about the same amount used as a year ago.

This Company Made Ice Back in 1846

Acquisition of the oldest ice manufacturing company in the United States, the Shreveport, La., Ice & Brewing Co., by the American Service Co. was announced today. The American company, one of the predominating ice manufacturing firms in America, doing business throughout the southern and south-central states, in the consummation of this sale acquires all the plants and physical properties of the Shreveport company which was established in 1846.

American Service Company now has three plants in Shreveport, the second largest city in Louisiana and one of the more important manufacturing cities of the South. Shreveport has become the leading mercantile and financial city in the northern Louisiana-Texas-Arkansas area.

McFadden Would Limit Reserve to Stated Duties

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Jan. 21—The public has been led to believe that the federal reserve authorities, being above mere profit-making, had a roving assignment to keep ordinary banking sound and socially useful.

Louis T. McFadden, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, in a recent speech attacked the system for using its routine powers along lines not specifically outlined in the federal reserve act. He pointed out dangers which he believed exist if bureaucratic agencies are permitted to exercise too much discretionary power.

"Let the federal reserve system be on its guard against overstepping the bounds of authority vested in it," he warned. "In banking policy it can circumscribe the field of credit arising out of the use of federal reserve funds. Further than that its policy does not extend, although there has been imposed on the federal reserve board by law the duty to perform many ministerial and routine acts. Beyond the federal reserve policy of credit, all questions of general banking policy have been reserved by Congress."

Mr. McFadden, who is himself a Pennsylvania national banker, puts a strict construction on the federal reserve act. I am inclined to think that a somewhat more liberal construction is consistent with sound banking policy.

Mr. McFadden referred specifically to the right of the federal reserve board to grant trust powers to national banks, and indicated the board had tried to dictate policy with respect to questions wholly unrelated to the exercise of trust powers. He also referred to a case in which a federal reserve bank refused to rediscount paper for a member bank for the allegedly irrelevant reason that the latter had spent too large a sum on a new bank building.

The federal reserve board, which has been made the goat of the banking system, has of late been receiving criticism from influential men in Congress as well as from outsiders. Even Carter Glass, senator from Virginia and co-author of the federal reserve act, has sharply criticised the system for not stopping the flow of credit into speculative Wall Street.

Popularity does not seem to be the lot of a central banking system, which in the nature of things is always stepping on someone's toes. By tending to make credit cheaper or dearer, it is always curtailing the prosperity of some groups and adding to that of others. The average business man or banker, whose own interests are temporarily thwarted, lacks the detachment necessary to approve a current reserve policy because of its abstract soundness or wisdom. Much of the criticism of the federal reserve system is mutually contradictory.

It is to be hoped that President-elect Hoover will seek to improve the standing of the federal reserve board by appointing personnel more in keeping with the extraordinary powers of the system. The fine precedent followed at the outset in appointing a man of the scholarship and practical skill of Paul M. Warburg has not been followed in subsequent appointments.

The growth of chain store systems, which carry on wholesale functions for themselves, challenges the continuance of the old-fashioned jobber. Leaders among the middlemen are coming to recognize that survival depends on finding a new technique for usefulness. What these methods are will be specifically set forth next Tuesday and Wednesday at the second annual convention of the Wholesale Dry Goods Institute, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. In discussing the proposed meeting, Alvin E. Dodd, director-general, pointed out: "After a year's existence, crowded with happenings of great importance, the Wholesale Dry Goods Institute meets for stock-taking and planning. This is not to be merely 'another convention.' Its speakers have not been selected to furnish soothing-syrup or high-sounding phrases. They are all men with the ability to think straight. Recommendations will be made on trade practices, relations with retailers, mill selling policies and wholesale merchandising methods."

Amos Bradbury, in Printer's Ink, makes the sagacious suggestion that insurance companies investigate the extent to which adjusters are creating ill will. In attempting to hold down claims to a minimum, they tend gradually to make enemies for companies, and to offset the effect of good-will advertising. Naturally, there are many exceptions. Without over-paying, the adjusters could create the impression that they want to ascertain the true damages, and to make payment in full cheerfully and promptly. At present, many adjusters seem disposed to engage in old-fashioned horse trading, and to seek to make the injured party feel as though he were a scoundrel trying to rob the casualty or accident company.

CHICAGO CRIME DRIVE JAILS THOUSANDS

Chicago, Jan. 21 (INS)—What is called by Police Commissioner William E. Russell "the greatest roundup of underworld characters in the history of Chicago," ended here today when the county jail doors clanked shut on the 3394th prisoner.

All of this vast number had been arrested within a period of 36 hours, beginning at midnight Saturday. The county jail is jammed from the cellar to the roof.

"The police department has finally struck," said Commissioner Russell. "My men are determined to drive 'the man with the gun' from Chicago.

"Every detective in the city has been working 24 hours without sleep. What they have accomplished in that time shows that they mean business.

"The result shows also that this department needs 3000 more men to make Chicago's streets safe for law-abiding citizens."

Meanwhile, Chicago's half-world—that part of it not already behind bars—cringed and ran for cover as the terrifying sirens of bureau cars echoed through the streets.

As the unprecedented police roundup gained momentum yesterday and last night, a panicky exodus by the city crooks, racketeers and hoodlums tried to match its pace.

Although sporadic raids had been made during the day, the main offensive was not launched until dusk last night when Commissioner of Detectives John Stege gathered 500 men at headquarters. Deputy Commissioner John Egan acted as Stege's assistant.

Every section of the city was invaded simultaneously. Downtown hotels, speakeasies, dance halls, cabarets, even the fashionable "night clubs" along the Gold Coast swarmed with detectives and uniformed police.

The prisoners ranged from unshaven, cap-adorned thugs to immaculately groomed men in evening dress. Every recognized gangster or racketeer and every person found in possession of a gun, were taken into custody.

One incident of the drive was the arrest of Richard Klein, 24, and James Murphy, 28, said to be men with sentences at San Quentin Penitentiary behind them.

Klein and Murphy were holding up two plainclothes detectives, not knowing they were officers when a raiding squad arrived and arrested them.

HOOVER LEAVES ON REST TRIP

By GEORGE R. HOLMES, International News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Jan. 21—Herbert Hoover went South today pretty well satisfied with the results of his two-weeks' trip in the capital.

For the next month he will relax in Florida's sunshine, fish in tropical waters, begin work on his inaugural speech and complete the personnel of the Cabinet which he will take into office with him on March 4.

Hoover will have at least four weeks of comparative seclusion on an island in the middle of Biscayne bay, where he will see only those he wants to see, and where his every waking moment is not caught up in the cross currents of personal contacts with politicians. He left Washington with half of his Cabinet regarded as fairly well settled.

Andrew J. Mellon will remain as Secretary of the Treasury, and William M. Jardine will carry on as Secretary of Agriculture. The decision as to these holdovers is considered as definite and final.

In addition, three other appointments are classed in the "probable" column—William J. Donovan of New York as Attorney-General, Walter F. Brown of Ohio as Postmaster-General and Louis S. Cates of Utah as Secretary of the Interior.

Smith May Visit Hoover at Miami

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Cryptic remarks by Alfred E. Smith on his departure for a vacation were interpreted by his friends today as indicating that he would call on President-elect Hoover in Miami.

Though Smith said he and his party would remain "as long as we are having a good time," it was learned his plans call for a stay until March 1. The Smith party will first go to Savannah, thence to Sarasota, Fla., to visit Carl Espy and John Ringling, then to Miami. John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, was to join the party at Wilmington, Del.

Two Women, Ire Aroused, Will Fight a Duel

Budapest, Jan. 21 (INS)—The first duel ever fought in Hungary between two women will take place here unless the authorities intervene or the combatants take advantage of their feminine prerogative of changing their minds.

Miss Kathrina Forgo, a music teacher, challenged Mrs. Anna Kovac to a duel with foils because, she claimed, Anna insulted her. Mrs. Kovac retaliated with the allegation that the music teacher flirted with her husband.

AID GUNWOMAN, THEN RAID HER

There's nothing so beautiful in life as impartiality on the part of police. Today the Revere police first defended Mrs. Irene Cantone for using a revolver and then turned around and raided her store for beer.

Mrs. Cantone, who is 45, oper- Three men came in and demanded liquor, but she said she had none.

Then, according to her story, they began to tear the place apart. She obtained a revolver from home at the rear and drove them out.

Forthwith they reported the incident to the police, but the police ruled that Mrs Cantone had a right to defend herself and property—and she could also choose the weapons.

Then, just to be impartial in the matter, the police raided the shop, seizing 200 quarts of beer, they claim.

Mrs. Cantone will be in court now, anyway, charged with illegal possession.

REBELS ROUTED IN GUATEMALA

Guatemala City, Jan. 21 (AP)—An artillery bombardment today paved the way for an advance by Government troops into the part of Mazantanango still held by rebels.

The city was partially in the hands of loyal troops, and rebels also were driven from Salama.

Airplanes using bombs and machine guns were believed to have demoralized the insurgents so that the Government infantry was able to take over part of Mazantanango, including the railway station. Many insurgents were seen to fall in the strafing.

Minister Rectinos of Guatemala said in Washington that with Mazantanango reoccupied it was believed that the revolution would be suppressed in the next few days.

CAN REFUEL PLANE IN AIR ON GLOBE TRIP

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

CHAPTER I.

WELL, you must admit it was a surprising sight, to say the least.

A dead man of today, in an old, crumbling sarcophagus in an old, crumbling crypt in the old, mediaeval cathedral at Welbury.

No member of a Sightseeing Tour would expect to see such a sight or would fail to lose a little of his equanimity if he did see it.

As for me, I not only lost a little of equanimity, but my whole consignment of that valuable and desirable commodity went by the board.

For I was the one who first saw it—saw that modern corpse in that ancient casket, and I was so flabbergasted that I almost yelled aloud in my fear and terror.

[illegible] my poise was seriously [illegible] my common sense [illegible] I quickly realized [illegible] this emergency as a [illegible] per cent American should meet it, and behave as a [illegible] the Tripp and Hastings [illegible] Conducted Foreign Tours Company would be expected to behave.

I was ahead of the group being conducted through the old cathedral by a venerable verger who intoned his lecture in cultivated English accents.

The group numbered about twenty-five [illegible] the Tripp and Hastings concern was of the first class, and [illegible] its clientele as to quality and quantity.

It was, I often thought, [illegible] over with a conducted [illegible] I am by nature a conductor [illegible], rather than a passive passenger.

But I was only too thankful to [illegible] trip to Europe at all, and [illegible] receiving [illegible].

All [illegible] I had [illegible] of cathedrals. I had [illegible] to understand and [illegible] their points, for architecture was one of my hobbies and [illegible] had always had a charm for me.

[illegible] party was personally conducted [illegible] lovely August morning [illegible] cathedral, where we [illegible] over to the tender mercies of the old verger.

We went [illegible] the dark little staircase that descended to the crypt, and moved by a sudden impulse to explore [illegible] slipped away and ran down the steps.

Though not as light as in the [illegible] above, the crypt was only a [illegible], and in the dimness I [illegible] the outlines of a man in [illegible] lying in a stone coffin.

[illegible] was on the floor and [illegible] it, to look more care[illegible] I saw the man was dead [illegible] be no doubt about that, [illegible] only too apparent that [illegible] in the left eye [illegible] effect [illegible] and a spur [illegible] I found a [illegible] bottle [illegible]

[illegible] tell him my story three [illegible] I could get it into his [illegible]

[illegible] went away and I stayed behind, wondering who the dead man was and who had dealth him his death.

I took a good look at the victim, and though I didn't recognize him I felt certain I had seen him before.

He was an American, of that I was sure, and his general effect was that of a tourist. He was not of our party, that I knew, but he had the unmistakable getup of a man traveling for pleasure.

Moreover, there were several of his belongings or apparently such scattered about.

Flung over a nearby coffin was a light weight overcoat, and a hat; near them, on the floor was an umbrella and a camera, and a folded newspaper.

Cupid a Jinx!

LOSES AT LOVE

Mumtaz Begum, Nautch girl dancer, who has divorced Abdul Rehman, Indian hide merchant. She was the ex-sweetheart of Nancy Miller's husband, an ousted rajah.

Attitude of Man's Body Only Adds to the Mystery

Why [illegible] that man, or any [illegible] take off his hat and coat, arrange himself comfortably in an old [illegible] at himself [illegible]?

For [illegible] he had been, there was no other explanation of that wound [illegible] to include an eye, a portion of the temple and a part of [illegible].

[illegible]

I did see some whitey-yellow grains and I wondered what they could be.

Unable to answer my own questions concerning them, I scraped up a few of them, and placing them in an old letter I had with me, I put it back in my pocket.

And then people came. Two or three dignitaries or custodians of the cathedral and three or four of the constabulary.

They all looked at me sharply, and I wondered anew why it is that the man who first sees a victim of murder is invariably picked for the murderer.

"Your name, sir?" they said, sternly.

And I answered, truthfully. "Motram Oakley."

I [illegible] them further that I was from New York city, and was on a pleasure tour under the auspices of Tripp and Hastings Ltd.

That I was for the current few days at the Terrace Garden Hotel, on High st.

"Then you belong to that party now being shown through the cathedral," declared the most inquisitorial of the policemen, and I admitted his deduction correct.

"Do you know this man?" the policeman asked, pointing with his pencil to the quiet figure in the stone coffin.

"I don't know him," I said positively, "that is, I do not know his name. But I have an indistinct impression of having seen him before, though this I cannot swear to. I only can say, that I think I have seen him before, but if so, I do not know who he is, and I am sure I have never spoken to him, nor he to me."

"Hum," he remarked irritatingly, "you tell it well but how do I know you are speaking the truth?"

"Look here, Mr. Snelgrove," I said wrathfully—I had gathered in his name by this time—"it's a detective's business to know when a man is speaking the truth."

"Well," said another policeman, who, it seemed, rejoiced in the name of Pollard, "if that's all we can get out of Mr. Oakley, we might better go on with our business."

Snelgrove nodded, silently, and Pollard and an assistant went busily to work on the mysterious occupant of [illegible]

[illegible] about two or three [illegible] coffin, in which [illegible] Mr. Glynn must necessarily have been when he was killed.

"Was he then unconscious?" I cried out, unable to reconcile otherwise the astonishing circumstances.

The doctor flashed a penetrating glance my way, and ignored my question.

Snelgrove went to the coffin, looked carefully at the inert body therein and then said:

"Yes, he was shot after he was put in the coffin—"

There was no doubt as to the identity of the victim of this dastardly crime. Warren Glynn it must be, for the camera had his name inside on a card, and [illegible] belongings and clothing were [illegible] witnesses to the same.

In response to police summons a messenger appeared from the Lanthorn.

"It's Mr. Glynn," he said, his voice shaking. "It's him all right, and that's his hat and coat and camera, yes, and his guide-book, he always carried that guide-book, with a yellow ribbon book marker—see?"

"He took pictures often?" said Pollard, looking at the camera.

"Most always carried that thing with him. Had a lot of films printed first day he got here. Often showed his pictures to anybody who'd look at 'em."

"Now," Snelgrove said, "we'll take Mr. Glynn to the morgue, but we'll first have the cathedral emptied and closed. There'll be plenty of red tape to this—a deed of blood done

Two Dead in Hotel Fire

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 21 (AP)—Two persons were dead today, 10 were injured and 100 guests and employes were driven to the street by a fire which burned the National Hotel in the downtown district.

NON-STOP FLIGHT IS FEASIBLE

New York, Jan 21 (INS)—A non stop refueling flight around the world for heavier than air craft is entirely feasible from every point of view, a poll of leading aviation experts made here today by International News Service, shows.

The poll was taken because of the widespread interest in the east in the $50,000 prize offered by the Denver Evening Post for the first flight of this kind.

"The proposed non-stop refueling flight around the world is the next logical step in long distance flying, Earl L. House, vice-president of the Moth Aircraft Corporation, said. "The United States has the planes and engines which have proved their endurance, and the pilots who can fly them. If proper ground organization can be established through Asia and Asia Minor, the thing is entirely feasible as a sporting proposition. We wish to commend the enterprise of those suggesting the flight."

Thomas L. Hill, president of the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation, which sponsored the recent cross-country solo flight of Richard James, 17-year-old Flushing, L. I., schoolboy, was unusually enthusiastic over the Denver newspaper's offer.

IMPRESS PEOPLE

"It will be a great thing for aviation," he said. "It will impress people with the safety and convenience of air travel more than anything else has done. A round-the world flight without a stop is a sound project. Motors and planes have proved that they can stand the strain of a flight of that length and the recent performance of the Question Mark on the Pacific Coast answers the fuel problem.

"There will be little danger attached to the flight across the United States and the Atlantic. The real danger lies in the hop from Tokio to Honolulu, where all the skill of a highly efficient navigator will have to be brought into play.

IN NEAR FUTURE

"I have no doubt but that a flight of this kind will be made in the near future, Frank G. Pell, secretary of the National Aviation Society, said. "The Denver Post's offer is indeed a timely one and the benefits to aviation which will accrue from it are inestimable.

"Of course it will take lots of careful planning and real enterprise to put the flight over, but those things are a matter of course in this country of great achievements. I heartily recommend the Post for its offer and trust that some aviator will win the prize very soon."

IN CHAIR, CONFESSES KILLING 8

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 21—Just as death was pointing its finger at the "zero hour" for him as the doomed slayer of six men, Paul Jaworski, today in the shadow of the electric chair, confessed to a seventh murder.

Jaworski was strapped in the chair at 7 a. m. and was pronounced dead at 7:06.

Calvin D. James, Bucks county murderer followed Jaworski to the chair. The first current was sent coursing through his body at 7:10 and he was officially dead at 7:11. James was convicted of having murdered W. H. Dunstan, Boylestown bootlegger.

KILLED PAL

Shortly before he was led from the death cell at the Western State penitentiary at Bellefonte, Jaworski said he had murdered his pal, Jack Vasbinuer.

Police said this confession cleared up the mystery surrounding Vasbinder, for whom detectives had been hunting in several states.

Vasbinder was under sentence of death when he and his slayer, Jaworski, shot their way to liberty from the Allegheny County jail, in this city, 17 months ago.

THRILLING DRAMA

Jaworski's confession, police said, added one of the most dramatic chapters in local criminal annals. It was almost like a religious confession, quietly done with the confessor knowing his doom was nearing, and his confessors nearby, intent, taking notes, and at the same time tensely thrilled by the drama of the scene.

Jaworski was informed he was to die at 7 o'clock this morning. Later he sent out word he had an important communication to make.

Then came the confession.

He said that after winning their freedom he and Vasbinder escaped to Detroit. There, because the latter proved to be a drug addict and was therefore regarded as undependable he was slain by Jaworski, and his body hurled into Lake Erie, Jaworski said.

Yawns When Told Brother Is Electrocuted

Detroit, Jan 21 (INS). The electrocution of Paul Jaworski in Pennsylvania did not disturb the sleep of his brother, Tom, in jail here.

At 8:30 deputy sheriffs and newspapermen went to the cellblock.

"Paul is dead, Tommy," said one of the deputies. He did not answer. Not until deputies asked direct questions would he say anything about his brother.

"Oh, he wasn't my pal—ever. He was too old," was his response.

"Didn't you ever think his career would end the way it did?"

"Oh, yes, I expected it," he said.

Tom went back to his cell, sat down on his cot—and yawned.

HELD IN RAID ON GOLD COAST

For five months the Gold Coast section of Somerville has been under guard of State police and was supposed to be "bone dry," but today, on their first raid since the excitement of August Somerville police arrested an alleged liquor seller and seized 17 pints.

The raid was conducted by Lieut. Charles J. Sharry, Sergt. A. F. Sharry and Patrolman Patrick F. O'Brien.

According to their testimony later in court, Carlo Macarelli sold liquor to a police agent who passed over a marked bill. When the liquor squad rushed in, Macarelli is alleged to have put up a battle and to have dropped the bill, which police recovered.

Cached in an alley at the rear of the building, in Warren st., the 17 pints were found.

Macarelli pleaded not guilty and his case was continued for a week.

Wireless Messages Inverted in Code

Chicago, Jan. 21 (INS)—Secret wireless communication has been accomplished in tests at the Bell Telephone Laboratories here.

A message is spoken into an ordinary transmitter in ordinary tones. A delicate device in the receiver distorts and inverts the message into unintelligible gibberish. At the point for which the communication is intended another inverting receiver changes the words back to their natural sound.

Rum-Runner Given 3 Months in Jail

Efforts of Essex County authorities to take precedence over Federal officials, in disposition of charges against Jack Grillo of Gloucester, were foiled today by Grillo when he pleaded guilty in U. S. District Court to rum smuggling charges and was sentenced to three months in Salem Jail.

He was one of several defendants indicted a year ago in connection with alleged liquor landings on the North Shore, and recently won a new trial from the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which reversed a finding of guilty returned against him by a jury in the lower court. Grillo was scheduled to appear for trial in Salem today on an indictment brought against him by Dist. Atty. W. G. Clarke of Essex County.

Continuation of Mergers Expected

Mergers and consolidations characterized American business throughout 1928, and may be expected to continue to do so during 1929, in opinion of 149 editors of business papers reporting under auspices of Associated Business Papers and National Conference of Business Paper Editors.

Flu Fatal to Doctor

Edgartown, Jan. 21—Worn out by attending an ever-increasing list of patients, Dr. Edward E. Worth, widely known physician died here following a week's illness with influenza. He was forced to give up his practice about a week ago. He leaves his wife.

ON STAGE INCOGNITO, WED

Earle Vernon Biddle, Jr. — Mrs. Biddle — James Randol McMullen

Earle Vernon Biddle, Jr., 21, of Richmond, Va., and the former Miss Harriet A. Caperton, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Randolph Caperton, of Richmond, are shown in International Newsreel photo, munching sandwiches in lieu of a wedding breakfast. With them is James Randol McMullen, their best man. They had been appearing incognito in Ned Wayburn's "Gambols."

BIG PROFIT IN SUGAR REVEALED

Washington, Jan. 21—Fifty representatives of the domestic and foreign sugar industry had prepared evidence today to press conflicting proposals for changes in import sugar duties before the House Ways and Means Committee hearings on tariff revision.

Opponents of an increase in tariff duties declare the largest American beet sugar company has averaged 32 per cent annually since 1917, and that the biggest concern in the Philippines has made 23 per cent profit.

[illegible] duty on [illegible] sugar is [illegible] a pound and on refined 2 [illegible] cents. Under the preferential trade treaty with Cuba, that country is allowed a 20 per cent reduction and pays a duty of 1.76 on raw and 1.91 on refined.

An increase in duties and a limitation on Philippine imports, now duty free, was understood to be the program of American producers of cane and beet sugar.

EVERLASTINGLY DOES the Junior League rally to good causes. There's never an occasion when a coterie of the fair [illegible] are not on duty. And this evening's Fiske Jubilee Singers concert at the Hotel Statler is no exception. The volunteers who will hand out programs and show the audience their proper places include Miss Alice Dodge, Miss [illegible] Elizabeth French, Miss Elinor Hopkinson, Miss Julia [illegible], Miss Jane [illegible], Miss Judith [illegible] and Miss Evelyn [illegible], the latter a post debutante.

Monrovia, in the Golden State, is their ultimate destination, the place where they will make headquarters until spring sits greenly on New England hills and they turn faces homeward.

ONE OF THE MORE IMPORTANT opera hostesses during the two weeks stay of the Chicago songsters in town will be Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper, chatelaine of the Draper box so conspicuously placed in the golden horseshoe. A dinner company with Mrs. Draper hostess precedes the premiere, and the hospitalities are continued thus brilliantly throughout the season of gay notes and gladsome dress in Boston's Temple of Music. The evening of the Senior Supper Dance, that falls within the opera season, Mrs. Draper will have two boxes of guests and take them on to the Hotel Copley-Plaza, when lights are out in the Opera House and the dance is the thing into the morning hours.

A PRETTY PENNY WAS turned for the Music School Settlement via Italian Fiesta at the Chestnut st. home of Mrs. George A. Noyes. Some magic has worked into a Boston exterior a perfect Italian villa with its courtyard and wall stairs, balconies and lattices. It made a perfect setting for Fiesta. And was conducive to the place being entirely sold out at both Saturday afternoon and evening performances. Miss Sally Batolle was there. Mrs. Ralph Bradley was another spectator, and the buds assisted—Miss Carolyn Read, Miss Mary Cowles and others of the League wearing gay Italian costumes.

YALE ACQUIRES RARE LAW BOOK

New Haven, Jan. 20—Through the gift from an anonymous donor, the Yale law school library has just purchased a copy of the first edition of Grotius "De Jure Belli et Pacis" published in 1625, it was announced today by the law librarian, Frederick C. Hicks.

The purchase is in accordance with the school policy to acquire for the library not only current law books but all the "monuments" of the legal literature of all countries.

Prof. Hicks said that this copy of Grotius' epoch making book on the history of international law is an example of the second or "B" impression of the first edition, in which there are a few typographical changes made by Grotius while the book was in the press. Of the first edition it is believed only three other copies are in the United States, those in Brown University, Harvard and the University of Michigan libraries.

Rickard Gave Jack All the Breaks

By JACK DEMPSEY

I ALWAYS was just "a little bit of a feller" to Tex.

The attitude quickly developed into a feeling toward me like an indulgent father would have for a son, and through all the years Tex gave me a break in everything.

In 1926 when I fought Tunney the first time and in 1927 when I mixed it with Sharkey and Tunney, Tex and I had no actual agreement as to my end. And this at a time when the public assumed that our negotiations were concluded.

Tex would always ask: "How much do you think you are worth?" Sometimes I'd mention my terms; oftener I didn't. But always Tex would say to me: "Now, Jack, you leave that whole thing open until I get around to it and I'll see that you get a square deal."

And this ever was my portion from Tex. He actually gave me more for the first Tunney fight than I had expected and I got around $50,000 more than I hoped for from the Sharkey battle.

For Tex, before we reached a point where we signed actual articles, would get his fingers on the public pulse and sort of "tune in" on its attitude toward the fight.

Then, if it looked like a sellout or anything near to it, Tex would give me the absolute limit.

When I attempted expression of appreciation for his generosity, Tex would always halt me: "Never mind that, little feller, you don't owe me any thanks.

"You're worth every dime I'm giving you. You have made plenty of money for me and the Madison Square Garden stockholders and those fellers are the kind of sportsmen that want to see every man get what he's worth."

In the years after 1925 when I started handling my own affairs, Tex was my financial guardian and my business adviser.

"Lots of fellers in this racket," he used to say, "that'll shed a lot of tears to get some of your money—and there's a lot of them that'll do some tricking if they can't get it by getting your sympathy all excited.

"NOW don't you pay any attention to them. When I give you your money you hustle to the bank with it right away and after that we'll sit down and figure out some good way to invest that money.

"Don't go to gambling with it. The feller that tries to beat the house can't win. I know, and you can't do any good for yourself buying stocks that are speculations."

As soon as pay off day came Tex would hunt me up and hand me a list that embraced the names of some gilt edged bonds and safe stocks.

"I've been talking with some of the brokers that are stockholders in the Garden, telling them about you and telling them they had to give me the names of some safe bonds and stocks for you to buy. Here they are. Now you go out and buy." And I did.

Practically every investment I made in recent years was at the suggestion of Tex and every purchase I made was good and it was profitable.

The advice of Tex made a round $100,000 for me and his advise likewise saved me nearly the same amount.

Several times tips were given to me. I passed them on to Tex for [illegible]. He had a dozen and one connections in the stock market and he promptly would get a consensus of opinion from his brokerage [illegible].

Afterward he would tell me "yes" and "no" and his rulings were infallible. Every security he approved increased in value; every one that he tabooed took a flop.

ONLY once did Tex and I "jam." That was a day when he came to me with eyes blazing, and he actually threatened to beat me up. If I hadn't laughed it off I guess he would have started socking me, for Tex was that kind.

His [illegible] and his courage and his faith in himself were so great [illegible] that he would have taken on all the Dempseys in the [illegible] if he figured there was just provocation for it. The incident [illegible] the outgrowth of a little generosity on my part. A friend of mine had a [illegible] story to tell and told it.

He needed money—plenty of it. If I couldn't help him he would have to jump off a few docks, or drink poisoned tea or something like that, so I slipped him the cash oar and Tex found out about it.

The fellow it seems, wasn't in quite the tough spot that he had [illegible]. He was spending the money in "high joints" fashion and [illegible] where he got it.

"Didn't I tell you not to go loaning money?" Tex fired at me. "Sure, but—" "There ain't any buts on that loan stuff, dija hear me?" he cut in. "I know, I've gone through it.

"It has cost me $500,000 to fell for hard luck stories, and if I hear about you doing any more loaning I'll knock hell out of you. You've got to quit loaning money or they'll be giving benefits for you before you're 40."

Protest Paavo Nurmi Running in Hub

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Paavo Nurmi's second American tour has just begun, but already disputes have broken out among sponsors of rival track and field meets.

Irate over what he termed Nurmi's "sudden decision" to run in the Knights of Columbus games in Boston next Saturday night, Jack Harris, member of the committee handling the Masonic benefit meet here the same night, has protested to the Amateur Athletic Union, asserting that there is no doubt that the "Phantom Finn" was "influenced by a man, or men, with power in official track circles."

Harris said his committee had been virtually assured that Nurmi would run in the Masonic meet and that arrangements were made to obtain the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. banked track so that the Finn could run in spiked shoes, either in a one-hour race or in the 3000 meters run for the Hugh H. Hirshon trophy.

Nurmi gained a leg on the Hirshon trophy during his 1925 invasion.

Although the Masonic meet officials had received no signed entry blank from the famous Finn, they did receive "such assurance as may be considered valid," Harris declared.

Then came the announcement that Nurmi would compete at Boston in a two-mile run against a field including Leo Lermond, best of this country's distance racers.

In a letter to Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., Harris said "that the manner of this sudden decision to compete at Boston leaves no doubt in my mind that he was influenced."

"This committe has no quarrel with the Boston 'promoters,'" Harris continued. "If Nurmi is an amateur, if he runs for the sport of the thing where and when he pleases, this committee can surely have no complaint. But if promoters are to bid for his services, then I feel we have just grounds for bringing this matter to your attention.

We will apreciate your attention to the situation brought about by what we believe was a virtual 'order' to Nurmi to compete in Boston rather than in New York.

Yachtsmen Urge New National Body

New York, Jan. 21—Florida yachtsmen are urging the Regatta Circuit Riders' Association, which has many members on the Delaware river, as the new national body, with aims and organization modeled along the lines of the American Automobile Association.

Outboard racers will be included in every regatta staged by the league on the Delaware next summer, it was announced by Chairman Gerard F. Bolte of the regatta committee. The schedule will be drawn up during the next few weeks and will be presented to the league for action at its February meeting.

Bruins-Canadiens War Tomorrow

SHORE MAY JOIN OWEN FOR TILT

Boston's hustling Bruins tilt with classy Les Canadiens at the Garden tomorrow night. Canadiens, over whom the Bruins scored their initial win in a couple of years at Montreal ten days ago, are after revenge on the local icemen.

The Bruins will have a rest after tomorrow's clash until their Sunday night game in New York against the Rangers.

Canadiens will be making their last scheduled appearance of the season in Boston tomorrow night, though, by the way, the flying Frenchmen and the Bruins are traveling these days, and they may meet in Stanley Cup play.

Each is in second place in its respective division, and each is rapidly making up lost ground after a mediocre start.

The Bruins played Chicago at Chicago last night, and immediately after the game started the long railroad trip home for the game tomorrow night.

Boston never has known such a scarcity of tickets for a game, as is the case with the Canadiens-Bruins scheduling. It is safe to say that some 50,000 persons would watch the play, if the seating space were available.

STARTS CLIMB TO MILE HEIGHTS

LEO LERMOND, B. A. A.

Leo's entry has been sent in for the James Curley mile race at the K. of C. games at the Boston Garden next Saturday. Leo is the best in the country at two or three miles. Jack Ryder says he will be just as good at the shorter distance. He must beat a great field to win Saturday.

FINE FIELD OPPOSES LEO IN MILE RACE

By JOE CASHMAN

Leo Lermond, America's greatest middle distance runner, has definitely decided to compete in the Knights of Columbus mile for the James M. Curley trophy at the William C. Prout memorial games at the Garden on Saturday night.

Since the Nahant boy stated in sending his entry that he did not choose to race against Paavo Nurmi so early in the season, the announcement by the "Casey" committee that he will start in the mile must also mean that the Phantom Finn, whose presence is expected to attract a capacity crowd to the meet, will run in the Leo Larrivee two-mile event.

Lermond has run few mile races during his short but brilliant track career, yet Jack Ryder, his coach, predicts that he will prove just as great a sensation over the shorter distance as he is in two and three-mile events.

In fact the mentor is grooming the youngster to be Lloyd Hahn's successor as America's champion miler.

GREAT FIELD IN MILE

The Unicorn flier will have a pretty good claim to the title if he can come through with a victory in the Curley mile, for opposing him will be Jimmy Reid of Harvard, intercollegiate two-mile and cross country champion; Charlie Sar[illegible], one of the B. A. A., New England intercollegiate mile champion; Frank Lalsey, famous University of Maine miler, and, in all probability, Ray Conger of the Illinois A. C., whose attendance has been promised by officials of his club, though his entry has not been received as yet.

There are few better milers than these in the world, and if Lermond can beat them out he will be established as an outstanding performer at the distance.

Nurmi's record breaking performance in the 3000-yard run at Brooklyn last Saturday night, his first start of his present stay in this country, proves that the Finn is as fast as ever and determined to engage in real races instead of merely giving exhibitions, as was frequently his wont during his last visit to these shores.

It has also, apparently, convinced local fans that the world's record for two miles, which the Finn holds, will be in danger when he starts in the Leo Larrivee race at the Garden, for there was an extraordinary demand for tickets when the public sale opened today.

Among those who will attempt to gain fame by beating Nurmi, are Gus Moore, A. A. U. two-mile champion; Phil Silverman, junior champion at the same distance, and Bob Dalrymple. None of these figure to be able to beat the "Peerless One," but they are a guarantee that Nurmi won't be able to loaf and win.

As fine a field of quarter-milers as ever [illegible] is entered in the Prout Memorial "400," including Larry McCafferty, Holy Cross [illegible]; Ray Cubel of the New York A. C., Joe Tierney of the same club and Ray Barbuti, still another wearer of the Wingfoot and the young man who scored America's only track victory at the last Olympics.

Any one of this quartet can run the distance in less than 50 seconds and the space separating the winner from the last man should be less than a yard, unless somebody breaks a leg.

FINE CARD READY

There are many other events on the card, too, and every one has a full quota of stars entered, insuring the meet of being the greatest ever staged by the Knights of Columbus.

The B. A. A., which will hold its 40th annual meet at the Arena a week from Saturday night, is refraining from making a lot of noise about the affair until after the "Casey" games are history but the Unicorn committee is very much on the job, signing up stars.

Among those who have already agreed to compete in the meet are Canada's three Olympic heroes, Percy Williams, Jimmy Ball and Victor Pickard. Williams won both the 100 and 200-metres dashes at Amsterdam, while Ball finished less than a foot behind Barbuti in the 400-metres classic, and Pickard was fourth in the pole vault.

None of these athletes have ever appeared in the Hub, and there is great interest in their visit. Williams will compete against the cream of America's sprinters in the 40-yard dash, Ball will be a starter in the "600" and Pickard will engage in his field specialty.

McCafferty and Sober have agreed to oppose Ball, and the committee expects that Barbuti will accept the invitation to do so. What a race that should be.

Yale Five Plays Green Tomorrow

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League has two games on its slate this week before the mid-year examinations cause a two weeks' shutdown.

Tomorrow night, Yale, tied with Cornell for third place, battles Dartmouth, which holds fifth. The following evening Pennsylvania, leading the circuit with two victories in as many league starts, takes on Princeton's Tigers at Princeton.

Yale already holds one triumph over Dartmouth, a one-point triumph achieved at New Haven last Monday.

Jim Maloney to Meet Friedman

Jimmy Maloney will return to the heavyweight wars a week from Wednesday night when he will battle Al Friedman, sensational young Jewish heavyweight from Roslindale, in the 10-round feature bout of the Sharkey A. A. all-heavyweight show.

The bout will be Maloney's first start of the year. Since he fought Con O'Kelley in Madison Square Garden on the night of December 22, Dynamite Jim has been taking a deserved rest.

Eddie Wineapple Is High Scorer

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Ed Winneapple, forward of the Providence College basketball five, has vaulted into the lead of the East's individual basketball scorers. Winneapple has tallied 134 points in 10 games.

Joey Schaaf of Pennsylvania holds second place with 130 points and Charley Hyatt of Pittsburgh third with 127. Winneapple leads in field goals with 56 and Schaaf in fouls with 42.

B. C. 6 HAS TWO WEEK LAYOFF

Boston College's hockey team, with a record of five losses and one victory, will have a two-weeks layoff before it swings into action again. The Eagles' next ice clash is booked with Holy Cross at the Arena on February 6.

Meanwhile practice will be held every other day. The only consolation remaining in this hockey campaign will be a victory over the arch enemy, Holy Cross. Coach Sonny Foley and his boys will consider the season fairly successful if they can lower the colors of the Purple.

In losing to B. U. the Eagles showed a brand of improved hockey and looked much better against the intowners than Holy Cross did but two nights previous. The score of the B. C.-B. U. contest might have been a lot closer but for the goal-tending of Silberberg of the Pi-

Borg Smashes His Own Record

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 21 (AP) Swimming at Manly, New South Wales, Arne Borg of Sweden today covered a mile in 21 minutes 6 4-5 seconds, beating his own world's record of 21 minutes 13 3-10 seconds.

The mark which "the Swedish Hurricane" shattered by more than half a minute had stood since August 12, 1925, when he established it in a race in Gothenburg, Sweden.

Tufts Ice Squad in Workout at Garden

The newly formed Tufts hockey team will hold its second practice session today in the Boston Garden. Coach LeCain has announced his intention of having at least 40 men on the ice, as on Saturday.

The prospects for a fairly good aggregation seem to be promising as some of the positions are taken care of by former high and prep school stars. The front line is apt to cause the coach worry, however.

Sully Montgomery Is a Humorist, It Seems

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 21 (AP)—Declaring tonight's bout to be "the chance of a lifetime," Sully Montgomery, former Center College football star, today was in top shape for his battle with Young Stribling.

Montgomery stepped through a light workout yesterday as a windup. Stribling is not here yet, but will arrive just before the bout. The scrap is scheduled to go eight rounds to a referee's decision.

European Natators Take Annual Bath in Seine

Paris, Jan. 21—Twenty one polar bears of the human variety took part in the annual intersectional winter swimming contest across the River Seine at Paris. Some came from afar for the event, five nations being represented. Czecho-Slovakia sent a hardy old-timer, P. Nikoden, who defeated some of the young contenders despite his 64 years. P. Zhahlen of France reaped premier honors in 3:18, 10 yards ahead of M. Malfait of Belgium, the runner-up.

Kaplan and McGraw to Box in Bridgeport

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 20 (AP)—Louis (Kid) Kaplan of Meriden, former featherweight champion, and Phil McGraw of Detroit tonight signed for a 10-round bout at the Waterbury State Armory, Jan. 31.

Layton and Hoppe Play in New York

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Johnny Layton, the world's champion and Willie Hoppe, former balkline star start a special 400-point three-cushion billiards match here today. The match is to be played in eight blocks of 50 points each.

Tigers Confident After Fine Win of Saturday; Brookline Boy on Right Wing

Boston Tigers battle Sprague Cleghorn's Bulldogs in the Rhode Island Auditorium to night.

It will be the first of three engagements this week. They will go back to Providence Thursday to meet the [illegible] and will tackle the league leading Springfield club in the Arena [illegible] Saturday night.

The [illegible] of Bob Taylor and [illegible] Saturday night has increased the confidence of the team and the players can see nothing ahead but first place.

The Tigers have played three less games than Springfield and Philadelphia, two less than Providence and five less than New Haven.

Accordingly, though they are not at the top of the league they are as well if not better placed, than any team in it.

From now to the end of the season they have nine games at home and 13 on the road. Thus far they have lost only one game out of town and the schedule apparently favors them.

Clark Heyd and Johnny Loucks will not be able to play at Providence tonight.

Moncton Atlantic Six Here This Week

Amateur hockey followers will have a treat this week when the Moncton Atlantics, composed of many of the best players in the Maritime provinces, come to Boston to play a two-game series with the University Club, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

The Atlantics will have Sammy Murdock [illegible] center; Patty [illegible] and one or two others who [illegible] were with the [illegible] was played here a [illegible].

The University Club defeated the [illegible] two out of three last season but the spectators were given [illegible] thrills in the two games played in Boston.

[illegible] Murdock, rated as the speediest and [illegible] stick handlers in the [illegible] rapidly putting the Atlantics in line for the championship of their district again this winter.

Murdock is one of the best amateur centers in the game, and more than one professional offer has been received by him.

University Club will be at its full strength, and the series should provide plenty of excitement for the fans.

Husky Relay Meets Maine on Saturday

Northeastern athletes will be idle until Saturday, when the track team competes in the Prout Memorial games. The varsity quintet plays Mass Aggies and the frosh five faces Lawrence Academy.

Both basketball games will be at the Y. M. C. A. Mid-year exams are on this week at Northeastern, accounting for the quietus in sports.

The husky relay team will be picked today, according to Coach Parsons. Northeastern is running again against University of Maine at the K. of C. event. Maine won by a stride last year in a thrilling race. Northeastern will enter more athletes in other events than ever before.

Guyon Signed to Coach at Clemson

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 21—Joe Guyon, for years a player in the American Association, has been added to the coaching staff at Clemson college.

The great Indian athlete is about through with baseball and will probably devote most of his time to the Dixie college.

Pair of Giants Sign Contracts for '28

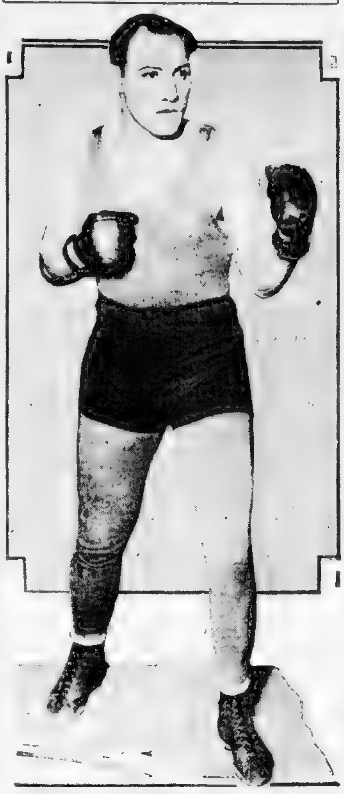

New York, Jan. 21—Two more Giants mailed in signed contracts. One was pitcher Harry Kelly, purchased from Memphis, whither he had drifted after an unsuccessful trial with the Senators.

The other was Herb Pyle, a pitcher, bought for experimental purposes from Chattanooga.

SHARKEY'S OPPONENT

K. O. CHRISTNER
The hard-punching Akron heavyweight tackles Jack Sharkey on Friday night in the Madison Square Garden. Christner bounded into fame when he knocked out Knute Hansen in eight rounds.

Amateur Ring Stars to Clash Tonight

The Knights of Columbus Boxing Association of Hyde Park will stage a brilliant amateur boxing tournament at the Municipal Building, Hyde Park, tonight. The class of the simon pure mitt flingers have entered the tourney and some rugged boxing is looked for.

The classes will be 112, 118, 126, 135 and 160 pounds.

Lewis Wrestles Gardini Tonight

New York, Jan. 21 (INS)—Ed ("Strangler") Lewis, who was tackled out of the heavyweight wrestling championship by Gus Sonnenberg in Boston recently, will make his first appearance here in five years tonight when he meets Renato Gardini, Italian champion, in a finish match. If victorious Lewis will seek a return match with Sonnenberg.

SHARKEY IS AT RIGHT WEIGHT

New York, Jan. 21—Jack Sharkey is here to finish training for his 10-round bout with K. O. Christner which will be staged at the Garden on Friday night.

The Boston heavyweight contender declared he weighed 191 pounds when he finished training in his home town on Sunday. He plans to work at Stillman's today, tomorrow and Wednesday. He will rest up on Thursday.

Sharkey expects to scale around 190 pounds when he steps into the ring against Christner. This is his best fighting notch.

Christner is also working here for the bout. The Akron heavyweight blazed his way to fame when he knocked out the highly touted Knute Hansen in eight rounds. He declares he will do as much for Sharkey.

Jack Dempsey and Bill Carey are much concerned over what Sharkey does in the Christner bout, as they have him signed to battle Young Stribling at Miami, Fla., on Feb. 27.

Sharkey has been guaranteed $100,000 for the Stribling bout. There isn't any clause in the contract which would enable the Madison Square Garden Corporation to call off the match in the event Sharkey should meet with defeat on Friday night.

Sharkey rules a 10 to 8 favorite over Christner in the early betting.

DISABLED VETS STAGE BOUTS TOMORROW

Silver Star Chapter No. 13, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, is composed of men wounded and gassed in action, and men who have received major disabilities by reason of their service in the World War. The chapter is staging a boxing show tomorrow night at Scenic Auditorium, Berkeley st.

This Chapter organized in January 1928 for the purpose of helping its members and assisting the National Headquarters to carry on work for the disabled veteran by enlisting every eligible to this order, which has been endorsed by all our presidents since the D. A. V. came into existence in 1920.

Gen. Hines, Director of the Veterans' Bureau, has cited the D. A. V. for its co-operation with the bureau handling the disabled man's problems.

BENEFIT SHOW

The Chapter is putting on the entertainment and boxing show, the proceeds to be used to establish a Welfare Fund for the Chapter and to contribute towards the Trust Fund now being raised by the National Organization.

A splendid bill is to be given. Jack Sharkey, Jimmy Maloney, and several prominent boxers are scheduled, as well as plenty of good amateur bouts refereed by Billie Rolfe.

Then there are the Famous Montreal Midgets. Between bouts, eight first class vaudeville acts will be put on by Jack Slattery. "Bossy" Gillis will appear.

NOTABLES INVITED

Invitations have been sent to the governor, mayor, and other officials of State and city. Former Mayor James M. Curley will be the speaker of the evening.

Tickets may be purchased at the D. A. V. Desk, Veterans' Bureau, 600 Washington st., also from A. C. McCarthy, Atlantic National Bank, 238 Huntington ave., and the YD Club, 200 Huntington ave.

GODFREY MAY BOX HEENEY

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—A return match between George Godfrey, giant negro heavyweight, and Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque woodchopper, will be staged at Havana, Cuba, on February 18 if present negotiations by the Madison Sq. Garden Corporation are successful.

Col. John S. Hammond, acting general manager of the corporation, revealed plans for the match had been outlined at a conference here Saturday. Godfrey's manager, Jimmy Dougherty, said the big negro was ready to meet either Paulino or Tom Heeney, the New Zealander.

Heeney, however, probably will not be ready to fight for at least a month.

Some observers, however, thought it extremely unlikely that Paulino's handlers will sign for the Godfrey match. Godfrey outpointed the Spaniard in a gruelling encounter on the Pacific coast last year. Paulino practically is a certainty to appear in one of the big heavyweight elimination bouts to be held this summer and another defeat by the giant negro might throw him out of the picture entirely.

Lott Seeded In Canadian Tourney

Montreal, Que., Jan. 21 (AP)—George Lott of Chicago, defending title holder, is seeded first in the draw for the Canadian indoor tennis championship tournament starting this afternoon. Other stars entered are Fritz Mercur, Harrisburg, Pa.; Julius Eligson, New York; J. Gilbert Hall, Orange, N. J.; Melvin H. Partridge, New York, and the Canadians, Willard Chocker and Gilbert Nunns.

Dr. Jack Wright, Montreal veteran, is in the United States and did not enter this year.

Mandell to Box Gillespie Tomorrow

Indianapolis, Jan. 21 (AP)—Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight champion, will box Jack Gillespie, Detroit, here tomorrow night instead of Joe Azzarella of Milwaukee. The substitution was made by American Legion officials when Azzerella reported he had fractured a hand in training.

Mandell's title will not be at stake, as his opponent will exceed the lightweight poundage. It will be the champion's first bout since he fractured his collarbone in a bout with Jimmy Goodrich last September.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"I ALWAYS had high hopes for Eddie Mack's future," said Mr. Boston today, "but I must now admit he has gone wrong on me. I received positive proof of this when I drifted into Eddie's office at the Boston Garden.

"A poem, printed in rather large type, hung on the wall. It was entitled 'Fighters Who Win the Crowds.' Mack admitted he wrote it.

"I have found in some 20 odd years spent in the vicinity of newspaper offices that there is no hope for a poet. Nick Flatley, Morton Birge, Frank Meloon and Win Brooks were never the same after they started doing the Longfellow stuff.

"I understand that Fred Lane and Al Nickerson insist that the reason why they have always been able to stand the rigors of our New England winters is because they never waxed poetical. These gentlemen have at times forgotten themselves during such happy affairs as farewell parties and New Year's celebrations, but they have restrained their natural desire for true sentiment after dashing off a few jingles.

"But when one becomes a regular poet like my friends, Flatley, Birge, Meloon and Brooks, there is little hope of a real reform. Now Mack has gone and joined the rest of the carefree poets. Here is his offering and I respectfully submit it as evidence against him.

"I have seen a number of fighters
Catch one on the chin,
And I love to see an egg that's down
Get off the floor and win.

"They all look great when they're out in front
And the other mug's all in.
But you don't see a man without plenty of heart
Get up off the floor and win.

"It's the same in every racket,
I'm willing to bet a fin.
The mob skies hat to the guy who can Get up off the floor and win."

"MR. BOSTON asked for a little air and a glass of beer after finishing his reading. He got only the air.

"That get up off the floor and win stuff is what makes me cry," piped the veteran. "Some day when you have a spare moment I would suggest that you quiz Eddie Mack, Johnny Buckley, Harry Kelly, Dan Carroll, Bobby Goldman, Rip Vanenti, Billy Henderson and the rest of the battling managers about their own pugilistic records. Ask them if they got up off the floor to win.

"I'll admit in open meeting that whenever anybody has busted me on the chin with sufficient force to knock me into a horizontal position that I always had great sympathy for Joe Beckett. After all, Joe knew when he was licked.

"I find that most of our matchmakers and managers who once were boxers never heard the bell for the final round. And it wasn't because they knocked the other fellow stiff.

"THE late Joe McCarthy, better known as 'Big Ike' to those of us who watched the morning sun rise as we sat around in his company, was nothing if not truthful. Said 'Big Ike' one evening:

"'Just because I happened to be a blacksmith they tried to make a fighter out of me. As a fighter I was an awful bum. If I missed with the first sock, I always got knocked out. I finally missed so many punches I decided it was better for me to become a manager and thus keep out of the daffy house.'"

"I UNDERSTAND that Eddie Mack ran up quite a long list of kayos when head skate boy at Alex McLean's old Park sq. roller skating rink. Somebody then kidded Eddie into getting into the ring in a real fight. Eddie soon decided he would be able to enjoy his meals better if he became a manager.

"MARTY KILLILEA, who piloted Johnny Wilson to the world's middleweight championship, could have given most of the managers nine rounds and knocked them out in the 10th. Marty could also have upset most of the so-called pro boxers. As he was handy with his dukes, Marty, naturally, never desired to be a boxer and always steered clear of trouble.

"I would like to see Marty step back into the boxing racket with another world's champion.

"Meanwhile don't get poetical. Even Kipling has had his troubles."

POLO

By BILL McAULEY

The 101st Field Artillery pony polo trio won their first start in the Commonwealth Club League at the Commonwealth Armory Saturday evening, by the narrowest of margins.

One-half goal separated them and the 110th Cavalry when the contest ended.

The Artillery trio, despite the fact that they spotted the Cavalrymen three goals, were fortunate in gaining full points for the latter deprived themselves of the victory by committing too many fouls.

The Artillery trio of Needham, Furber and Pitman are beginning to slow up a little but this is to be expected, for the players have been members of the team for the past eight seasons.

Jenkins, Vroom and Mangini, the Cavalry trio, rode much harder but their teamwork was not quite on a level with their opponents.

Roland Mangini, playing back, was the best of the trio and his five goals from long range were loudly applauded.

Colonel Dan Needham, at No. 1 for the Artillery, was the best of the Artillery trio and was high scorer with seven goals to his credit.

The Harvard junior varsity won from the Crimson frosh as was expected, and are out in front in division B of the league.

The Jayvees had all they could do to defeat the yearlings after spotting them three goals, and the two and a half goal margin they had at the finish was the smallest they have had in any game they have played.

Mello to Try for Kayo in Garden Bout With Dundee

Ace of Middleweight Deck ⌒ Set to Drive For Pan-American Title ⌒ Phantom Elusive as Ever

AL PACKS TERRIFIC WALLOP

New England Champion Is Fit for Clash With World's Title Holder

By JACK CONWAY

YOU may write it in the book that Al Mello, New England welterweight king, is ready for his 10-round battle with Joe Dundee, which will be staged at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

This writer found Mello in the midst of a fiery workout at Jim Toland's gym. In all, Al breezed through 10 rounds. Three rounds were devoted to a brisk ring workout.

When Mello completed his drill he scaled 152 pounds. With four more days of training, Al should be in the best possible condition when he goes into action against the world's champion.

Jack Conway

Under the agreement in connection with the bout, Mello must weigh over 148 pounds, but not more than 150 pounds at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest.

Dundee has compelled the Lowell warrior to scale above 147 pounds so that his precious world's championship will not be at stake when the big punches start to fly at the Garden on Friday night.

DON'T be surprised if Mello should knock Dundee stiff. It is a cinch that the New England champion intends to go after a knockout victory. During his workouts at Toland's, Al has been letting everything go with his punches. He wants to lick Dundee in decisive style. He is anxious to prove that he has real fighting ability and that he is the rightful ruler of the welterweight roost.

Roberts knocked out Dundee. So did Thompson. Mello, therefore, figures he has an even chance to end the big wallop over.

Joe, of course, is quite a swatter himself. He has flattened Mickey Walker and Tommy Freeman, and he will try to add Mello to his list of knockout victims. It is unlikely that he will be successful.

BOBBY GOLDMAN has taken personal charge of Mello's training for the Dundee match. Goldman is one of the best handlers of boxers in the country and he is sure to have Al fit when he leaves the barrier at the Garden.

Dundee and Max Waxman, his manager, are expected to arrive here in time to report at Toland's gym tomorrow afternoon.

Dundee is under contract to defend his title against Young Jack Thompson in New York, but in the event Mello wins Friday night the latter will insist upon the championship shot in the New York Garden.

THE Mello-Dundee mill is one of those "naturals" which has been hanging fire for two years. It is one of the best welterweight cards ever offered to New England fans, and it is sure to furnish a whale redhot with action.

Two sturdy youths will be in there trying for a decisive victory.

And one of them is sure to be disappointed.

New England fans say it won't be Al.

They will be on hand Friday night to cheer their idol as he crashes the world's champion to the canvas.

The gang always did like a two-fisted fighter like the Mello type.

Bike Race Winners Get Dough Today

New York, Jan. 21 (INS)—Dagenais and Willie Grimm, the New Jersey youths, who won the six-day "outlaw" bike race by a one-point margin on Saturday night, will be paid off today.

The promoters also will decide whether they will hold another grind at the Kingsbridge Armory oval in March. Last week's race was not a financial success.

WOODSIES GET WIN AND LOSS OVER WEEK-END

By BILL McAULEY

The Woodies got a division of the points in the two games played over the week-end against Fall River and Jersey City, the locals losing to the Marksmen Saturday 2-to-0, but defeating Jersey 5 to 0 at Jersey.

The Marksmen have had the edge on the Blue and Gold this season and an ex-Woodsie, Alex McNab, has been chiefly responsible for the Spindle City team's superiority.

Had McNab been on the Hub side Saturday, the Woodsies probably would have won. The former Hub favorite got both of the opposition goals, being on the alert when the local defense was taking it easy.

The Woodsie attack was great against Jersey City scoring 5 goals. This is the worst defeat the Skeeters have suffered since they joined the league.

The New York Nationals entered the final of the America cup by defeating the Brooklyn eleven 3 to 2. The Saturday game between the pair resulted in a 5 rout 10, which, added to the second score, makes the final tally 8 to 7 in the favor of the Nationals.

The Nationals will meet New Bedford in the final. No date has been set for this tilt but it will be played sometime next month.

Providence by virtue of their victory over New Bedford Saturday are leading the second half of the league.

MONTREAL IS WINNER

The most successful curling bonspiel ever staged in this country was completed at the Brookline Country Club indoor rink before a packed house. There was an entry list of 24 teams competing in the three days' play for the two trophies, the Stockton cup and the Clyde Park cup. The Stockton cup, won last year by Utica was carried across the border to Canada, the Royal Montreal club.

It defeated the Granite No. 2 team, another Montreal entry, 18 to 11, in the final match after 17 ends of play.

The Clyde Park cup was also won by a Canadian entry, the Toronto team defeating the Bireburn Country Club team 20 to 10 in the final.

The semifinals were played in the morning and resulted in the Granite team defeating the Country Club No. 4 team 17 to 11, and the Royal Montreal defeating Utica No. 2, 17 to 7, in the Stockton cup.

Tex Put on First Big Go for Publicity

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by New York American and International Service, Inc.)

WHEN Tex Rickard put on the Gans-Nelson battle for the lightweight championship of the world at Goldfield, Nev., September 3, 1906, he had no idea of becoming a fight promoter beyond staging a few minor bouts at Nome he had had no experience with fighters.

Rickard undertook the Gans-Nelson affair in the capacity of a ballyhoo man. He was ballyhooing the boom town of Goldfield.

He conceived the idea strictly as a publicity stunt and never had any idea of making money out of it for himself.

When the fight went over with a loud bang and returned a personal profit of more than $12,000 for himself, Tex Rickard decided that the promotion of professional prize fights must be a good racket.

From that moment until the day of his death Tex was always associated in some way with the fighting game. There were periods when he turned to other pursuits, but he always came back to the sport that was nearest his heart.

WHILE Tex Rickard never had a very high regard for fight managers as a class, there was always a certain bond of sympathy between him and the fighting men themselves. Had it not been for Rickard, poor old Joe Gans would have come out of that Nelson fight with practically nothing.

Billy Nolan, manager of Nelson, tried to grab everything in sight. In the preliminary arrangements Rickard practically acted as Gans' manager, and it was due to this that the colored fighter came out of the affair with about $11,000.

Nelson, who had been holding out for a guaranty of $30,000, received $22,500.

Rickard always felt sorry for Gans and many times in later years, when the old master was down on his luck, it was Tex who staked him. Nobody knows how many other indigent and broken down fighters Rickard staked in the course of his career.

He did these things in a quiet, almost secretive way and could never be induced to admit that he has done them.

WHEN Young Griffo died about a year ago and seemed destined for a pauper's grave, it was Tex Rickard who bought him a plot in Woodlawn Cemetery and arranged for a suitable tablet. That funeral cost him $875, the balance of the expense being borne by Jane Frazer Fish and Capt. George Maines.

Rickard attended the funeral and accompanied the body to the grave. Little did Tex think then that the same Rev Dr Moore, of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, who read the service over Griffo's remains, would be performing the same melancholy duty for him within the year.

When Rickard conceived the notion of putting on the Gans-Nelson fight he had no idea of extracting any profit from the fight itself. The profit was to come from the world-wide advertising the bout would give Goldfield.

If the fight left a deficit in its wake there were those in Goldfield who were willing to underwrite the loss and consider the publicity well worth it. If there were any profits, which seemed very doubtful to the young promoter as well as to all those associates with him in the scheme, they were to go to Rickard.

Negotiations carried on between Rickard and Nolan, Nelson's manager, developed the astounding fact that Nelson's end must be $30,000. No such staggering guarantee had ever been demanded by a fighter before in the history of the ring.

Many other cities were after the bout, but Nolan's extravagant demands scared the other promoters off.

BEFORE Rickard closed with Nolan he sold the idea of the fight to several other prominent Goldfield citizens, who guaranteed $25,000 of the $30,000 demanded by Nolan.

The other $5000 was pledged by Rickard himself. Other incidentals, such as the cost of erecting the wooden arena, were shouldered by Tex. He practically financed the entire show on credit.

And I don't think I had to go out a single I. O. U." Rickard said long afterward in telling of putting on that first big bout. "Then I did business with scrupulous perfectly willing to take my word for anything. I'd simply tell 'em I'd settle with 'em after the fight and they were satisfied."

Inasmuch as the receipts for the fight amounted to $68,975, those who had guaranteed Nelson's $30,000 never had to put a penny on the line. The fight was a financial success, both gratifyingly and financially.

It established Tex Rickard's reputation as a promoter. Every editor was paid off and for several days after the bout everybody remained in a glorious state of intoxication.

Rickard's saloon, the Northern and a land office business and the cash receipts were piled several feet high in back of the bar. No mining town ever saw a celebration to equal it.

LAWRENCE HIGH TRACK TEAM VERY STRONG

By DICK McSWEENEY

The week past was a busy one in schoolboy athlete ranks. It was an important week also to some of those athlete teams who faced their first strong competition.

In the case of Brookline high it was a sad week from the standpoint of track athletes, for the Newton harriers and jumpers captured the second half of the dual meet between these two schools with a total score of 81½ to 72½. Newton had scored 41½ points to Brookline's 34½ on the previous Saturday when the first half of the meet was held.

Next Saturday, Newton competes with Huntington school at Boston.

Another track team which may view last Saturday as a fateful day is found at Dorchester high school. The Red and Black track team made the trip to Lawrence and was defeated by the lopsided score of 63–14.

From this easy victory by Lawrence high, it is conceded that Lawrence will send a strong team to the B. A. A. and State meets.

B. C. high hockey team will play Latin school at 5 o'clock today at the Arena. A game was to have been played between these two sextets last Wednesday, but the lack of ice forced a postponement.

Latin will find B. C. high a tough opponent to down. The Maroon and Gold has several classy skaters in McGovern, Riley and Walsh. These boys are clever stick handlers also. They will make the Latin six hustle.

Latin followers are confident that they have a real team representing their school, and from the way Bucky Wantin and Sam Cumpana played last Saturday their confidence seems to have some justification.

It will be some tussle, the scrap between these two sextets. Latin will be a slight favorite to win.

It seems as though the B. C. high team can never get enough contests to satisfy its appetite for hockey. A game with Cambridge Latin has been booked for next Friday night at the Arena.

Paul Bailey, forme. B. A. A. ice star, is now coaching the Mission Hill high school six. This is the first year in which Mission Hill has been represented by a hockey team, but the showing thus far has been favorable.

Although Jamaica Plain polished his team off by a 4-to-0 score, Coach Bailey feels proud of the fact that Hyde Park had a hard time winning from Mission Hill by a 2-to-1 score.

Any team in the class of Mission Hill high which wants games should get in touch with Paul Bailey at once.

PAAVO NURMI GUS MOORE

McCOY, KOLOFF IN PRELIM GO AT GRAND

Bibber McCoy of Cambridge, most promising young heavyweight that prospect on the horizon, will appear at the Grand Opera House one more next Thursday night, when he will wrestle big Dan Koloff in one of the preliminaries to the Farmer George McLeod Dr Karl Sarpolis main bo.

McCoy was nothing short of a sensation last Thursday when he tossed the clever Frank Bruno twice in jestime, but in Koloff he will be facing one of the smartest and strongest heavyweights in the game.

Koloff trained Sonnenberg for his match with Strangler Lewis and much of Sonny's improvement is attributed to Koloff's services.

McCOY POWERFUL

The lion of the Balkans figures to beat McCoy on his experience, but McCoy is tremendously strong and has reduced wrestling to the simple terms of lifting his opponents over his head and slamming them to the mat.

He has a big following from Cambridge and judging by the advance demand for reservations, another capacity crowd will sit in at the proceedings.

McLeod, who is to wrestle Sarpolis in the feature match, is one of the outstanding contenders for the heavyweight title.

He and Sonnenberg had a gruelling match at the Arena a few months ago, and the Farmer is anxious to work his way into a return match with the new champion.

Sarpolis has appeared here many times and has always given satisfaction. He is expected here tomorrow, after a successful campaign in the middle west.

MALCEWICZ IN GO

Joe Malcewicz of Utica, another threat for Sonnenberg, is to wrestle Jack Cannon, Lithuanian champion, in the third bout of the card while in the opening match Henri Deglane, French heavyweight champion, will wrestle Frank Bruno of New York.

Ice Team Idle

The Mattapan Hockey Club desires games with any 16-18-year-old teams in or around Boston, at or away from home. Call or write, Manager Herb Brennan, 624 River st., Mattapan, Mass. Telephone Milton 3390.

Lesson by a Chef

RINALDO MESSUESSO, chef of "Pini's" Leon Pini's beautiful new restaurant at the Hotel Buckminster and also chef of the famous Weber Duck Inn, at Wrentham, will conduct the lesson in practical cookery next Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the Martha Lee Kitchen at 5 Winthrop sq.

Mr. Messuesso is well known to the members of the Martha Lee cooking school through his lesson [illegible] last spring and the two [illegible] parties which were enjoyed by members of the Martha Lee school at the Weber Duck Inn at Wrentham.

"Pini's" is Boston's newest and very lovely restaurant at the Hotel Buckminster, and offers the same delicious [illegible] and dinner menus that have made the Weber Duck Inn so justly popular, and at the same moderate prices.

Mr. Messuesso, a native of Abruzzi, Italy, was first associated with Leon Pini for [illegible] years at the famous Hotel Woodcock in Boston, going from there to the American House [illegible] to the Hotel [illegible] [illegible] to the Weber Duck Inn [illegible]

He certainly is past master in the art of delicious cookery and will demonstrate many famous Pini specialties to the Martha Lee audience Wednesday. These will include a complete planked steak dinner, roast duck, Pini's special cheese, etc.

It is a lesson that no one will wish to miss and we suggest arriving early for the best seats.

Beatrice Fairfax on Secrets of Charm

By Beatrice Fairfax,
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

YOU can be charming! I make this unqualified statement without doubt or hesitation. For every human being has within himself or herself elements that go to make up charm. All that is needed to bring them to full flower as the lovely quality of charm is encouragement, development—a chance to unfold.

The charm of you is not manners and viewpoints and ways that you have copied from others whom you consider charming, but the qualities about you that are perfectly natural to you, [illegible] a little different from other folks' ways of doing things.

Of course you may not seem charming to yourself, because you are accustomed to yourself. [illegible] stupid [illegible] a witty, entertaining "line of talk." Or, possibly, you consider that you lack charms because you cannot see your way to participate in some fads of the moment that other girls and young men find pleasurable. But I repeat just by being yourself, you can develop your own individual gift of charm, which is a little bit different from anyone else's exactly as roses are never identically alike.

The other day I was chatting with a very charming young man, one who holds a position of influence and power, which brings him in contact with thousands of young people—and older men and women also—who look to him for help and guidance in problems that arise in their daily lives. Some one introduced the subject of charm.

"The person with perfect digestion," remarked the charming young man, "is the person who eats wholesome food, then forgets all about digestion. Good digestion is natural, and only those who are always apprehensive about food and digestion are [illegible]

"In the same way, charm is natural [illegible]

[illegible] The moment you begin to worry because you lack charm or deliberately study to produce an effect [illegible]

I fully agree with my friend that charm is as much a natural attribute [illegible] as good digestion. The healthy individual is not self-conscious about his charm or his digestion.

Louise is naturally bright, breezy, [illegible] and she, herself, is pretty and chic. She is always surrounded by admirers and has more invitations than she can accept. Louise is charming.

Louise goes about with Margie, who is naturally quiet and demure. Margie is not the center of the group on all occasions, because she [illegible] the gift of chatter. She is not vivacious. Margie is, however, [illegible] enough not to imitate her [illegible]

Moreover, Margie, realizing she is not much of a conversationalist, [illegible] and is always able and glad to [illegible] or an hour.

Margie has less attention than Louise because she is less brilliant. But both girls, because they are natural and friendly, attractive and [illegible] And quiet Margie has one devoted friend, who is saving money with the idea of asking her to wear a solitaire engagement ring for his sake. In his eyes she is the One Sweetest Girl of all.

Dr. Louis E. Bisch Discusses the Voice

By Louis E. Bisch M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

THE degree to which we are affected by the voice of a person is not generally appreciated.

To be sure, we recognize certain kinds of voice as disturbing to our sensibilities. High-pitched, squeaking voices or rough, hoarse, harsh voices are examples of this. Likewise, we enjoy hearing a voice that is pleasing to the ear, is not too loud, is well modulated and has tone [illegible]

We do not, however, realize that the less marked gradations of voice, voice sounds lying between the most irritating types and the most agreeable, also influence us for or against the person possessing the voice.

I have known of several instances where one individual disliked another but did not know why and could not figure it out. By the simple process of elimination, however, taking personality trait by trait, it was discovered finally that the voice was the irritant.

In one case the voice itself was not really displeasing. It merely recalled another voice belonging to a person who had done my patient an injury. By association, therefore, the voice carried the irritating quality.

The production of voice sounds involves many anatomical structures.

The larynx is the main organ of speech. It lies in the front of the neck, the top of which is the [illegible]

[illegible] more rounded [illegible] In men it is [illegible] shaped and [illegible]

Extending across the larynx are four [illegible] vocal cords. The two upper ones [illegible] Therefore the upper cords are sometimes called the "false" cords and the lower the "true" vocal cords.

They vibrate when air, usually in expiration, passes between them while the cords are tense and therefore close together.

Sometimes, from a cold or too much loud talking, the cords become relaxed. Then the person can scarcely talk above a whisper.

Breathing has a great deal to do with voice and about the first thing taught in singing is how to breathe properly and how to "place" the voice. An effort must be made to throw the sound of the voice up [illegible] to obtain the best [illegible]

These are volume, quality and pitch.

Anatomical factors, of course, are important here; the thickness of the vocal cords, for instance, their ability to stretch, the size and shape of the trachea, etc.

Upon such structures, when favorable, depends the ability to sing in opera or on the concert stage.

Each of us, however, can improve his voice through a few singing lessons and even through intelligent [illegible]

[illegible] voice training in any [illegible] own voice [illegible] Then figure out how [illegible] others.

Fretting Is Harmful

By WINIFRED BLACK

"THE worst of you is you don't give a darn—not a darn, not even half of a darn—about anything."

That's what the man said to his wife, and what he said was perfectly true. She's the sort of woman who really doesn't give a darn or anything else for anything—not really.

She loves her husband, she loves her children, she loves her work and she loves her friends—but if the minute her husband shows he isn't worthy of her love, she doesn't love him any more.

She's done her duty by her children and she's loved them devotedly ever since they were born—but when little Mary ran away and married the chauffeur, [illegible] away and [illegible]

SHE did not. She had one or two good [illegible] and then she laughed and said [illegible] Mary [illegible]" and she wished Mary well, and let her live her own life—and that was that.

When Tom, her eldest son, decided to leave college and go down to South America to go into rubber for a living—whatever he meant by that—[illegible] according to [illegible] point of view. But Tom couldn't see it and so his mother packed his things and went down to the steamer with him, kissed him good-bye and laughed. "Tom's business, not mine," she said.

When [illegible] her sister quarreled with her and wouldn't speak for a year, Mary senior cried a little—and then she laughed, and that was all there was to it.

"I [illegible] days because [illegible] Mary [illegible] away. [illegible] husband's a good [illegible] fellow, he will never set the world on fire, and I couldn't very well ask him to meet the Prince of Wales at a dinner party.

"But what of it? I don't own Mary body and soul, she has her lessons to learn, [illegible] to learn them her own way. In the meantime I'm going on living. I really wouldn't know her husband if I should meet him on the street unexpectedly. I've sort of forgotten all about him.

"If Mary ever needs me she knows where I live and the day will come when she [illegible] In the meantime I've [illegible] of solitaire my dear friend [illegible] there's a new make of car [illegible] the [illegible] story [illegible] about a Scotchman, wait till I tell it to you.

WHAT Mary senior's husband said to her is true—absolutely true. A strange intruder in the evening mode is the belt of suede, the [illegible] accessory to the lace or moire frock. These soft suede belts are worn a little above the hip. The suede is crushed-like fabric to form a becoming line and the buckles are studded with rhinestones or large-colored brilliants.

It doesn't matter what suit you [illegible] with the afternoon panties. These fetching creations, composed entirely of lace, have decorative inserts of crepe de chine in the form of clubs, spades, diamonds and hearts. Another model has a four-leaf clover insert. They come with either a yoke top or a plain-fitting waistline.

Bowing its way into the mode, the bow scarf frequently accompanies the tailored suit and the fur jacket. These long, narrow satin scarfs are from six to ten inches in width. Sometimes they are worn [illegible] and then tied in a bow. Otherwise they are tied in a huge floppy bow with long streamers.

Spanning the silken expanse of your stocking, jeweled spans take the place of straps on evening slippers. Running crosswise from one side of the vamp to the other, they are a decorative as well as a practical touch. Rhinestones and colored crystal spans are particularly effective.

HE SUFFERED FOR TEN YEARS

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Relief in 2 Months — Doctor Recommended It

Constipation is dreaded not only for its own insidious self, but because of the many serious conditions and diseases it causes. Mr. Lind was a sufferer—but read how he found relief.

"For the past 10 years I have suffered from piles. At times I have been unable to work. I have tried suppositories, ointments, etc., but to no avail.

"Two months ago my grocer called my attention to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I began taking it regularly. Immediately the pain and annoyance from the piles was relieved. I found that it requires very little ALL-BRAN to give nature a fair chance to effect a cure."—WALTER J. LIND, R. 2, Box 157, Appleton, Wis.

Don't neglect constipation. At any time its poisons may take terrible toll from your health and well-being. Protect yourself. Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly—two tablespoonfuls daily, or in chronic cases, with every meal. ALL-BRAN brings sure, natural relief. It is what doctors call a bulk food. It sweeps the intestine clean and stimulates normal action.

Ready-to-eat with milk or cream. Also try the recipes on the package. Results guaranteed. Doctors recommend it because it is 100% bran. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Served in hotels, restaurants, and dining cars. Sold by all grocers.

This Day in Our History

THOMAS "STONEWALL" JACKSON, one of the Confederacy's ablest generals, was born at Clarksburg, W. Va., on January 21, 1824. He was mortally wounded at the Battle of Chancellorsville by his own men, by mistake.

The SKY RAIDER by COL. LINDBERGH'S FLYING AIDE Donald E. Keyhoe

A Thrilling Mystery Story of Love and Danger

What Has Happened So Far

Dick Trent, young aviator, has just joined the air mail service. On his first trip he carries an important letter from the owner of the field, Old Rand, to his son, Tommy. He locates young Rand, drinking, and flies him back to his own field to save him from dismissal. Dick falls in love with lovely Mary Rand and saves her from fatality by flying to her disabled plane in mid-air. Dick tells Lawson, a fellow-aviator, of his invention for a skywriting signal code. Lawson informs Dick he is leaving the service to be married. On his last trip Lawson is missing. Dick finds his plane burned and Lawson murdered. A package containing $250,000 is missing.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER VII.

FOR some little time Dick stood motionless as if stunned by his own deductions.

He had arrived at his suspicion so swiftly that he felt he must be wrong. Lawson—his friend—lying there dead! So much was fact. The rest was mere surmise.

Who couldn't leap to the immediate certainty that the plane had caught fire and Lawson, loosening his belt, had been flung to his ironic, unhappy death by the force of the impact?

And yet—that tail skid! It was unmistakable evidence. And the blackened steel compartment which had held that money, and which was now empty!

Dick went over to the body of his friend once more, white faced and trembling a little. Death was not a beautiful thing to see, nor was it made any kinder by the memory of those words Lawson had uttered only a few hours previously. Lawson [illegible] so much to live for [illegible] all for quitting the game [illegible]

Stooping, he forced himself to look. The blow that had crushed in Lawson's skull might have been [illegible] story to his air-wise eyes?

Could Lawson have planned to take the money himself, come down here to meet a confederate, fallen foul of him, and paid for the quarrel with death? Dick brushed away that fantastic thought with a sense of [illegible]. He wished he had no [illegible] Lawson [illegible] honest, straightforward heart, was incapable of treachery in little things or big. Lawson was no conspirator, he was the victim, either of some inexplicable accident or some equally baffling crime.

[illegible] tried to concentrate and understand. What could have happened?

The first of the mysteries: Lawson had come down. Why? Had he been signalled down? Had he had engine trouble? One of those, it must be.

Lawson had landed on the one [illegible]

Dick frowned. Granting that a criminal, possibly leader of a gang, with a brilliant plan, had signaled Lawson down. But would Lawson come down? With all that money in the compartment? That, too, [illegible]! Could he have been shot down from the ground—crippled enough to make him land? No—he would not have flown that low.

Where had the murderer and his gang gone? They could not be near or he would have seen them from the air.

[illegible] Dick's imagination moved, in a helpless tangle of [illegible] that would make no pattern.

But in the end he was certain of his facts—even though he could not explain them.

The plane had certainly landed on the rise of the slope. It had [illegible] down [illegible] until it nosed into the bank. That had not been the work of Lawson. Whose work then? Whose hands had accomplished the murder? Whose lips could explain the missing steps of the puzzle?

Dick returned to the top of the [illegible]

A keen detective might not have come to the prompt realization of the plane's change of position. But a detective, he thought ruefully, would have known now where to seek further clues.

It was not enough to say that [illegible] Lawson had been [illegible] then dragged down the slope, after his plane had been nosed into the bank and set on fire in the grey dawn. There must be more authentic proof of this. The disappearance of the money—that was an important factor. Was there anything else to include in the report [illegible]

As he [illegible] himself that, [illegible] from where he was sitting. A stone seemed to have been recently dis-

This gun was the gun of the murderer [illegible] and final proof of the tragedy that had occurred.

He tramped over to it. There were tire tracks, but whether they were fresh or old, he was not expert enough to say.

He made his decision quickly. He [illegible] be in the hands of the police. To let them have the news as speedily as possible was the best course now.

He wrapped the Luger pistol in a cleaning cloth, and returned to his plane. With a short take-off, he was climbing above the range that intervened between him and the [illegible]

Mechanics and field workmen were there to help him get out, looking at him curiously. The news of Lawson's disappearance must be known by everyone by this time. But he said nothing, only setting off at a run to the flight office.

He pushed open the door without knocking. Then he halted. Carmichael was not alone. Mary Rand was [illegible] restlessly. She looked [illegible] worried. Her eyes [illegible] as to read the [illegible]. Even Carmichael had put [illegible] air of tired amusement as [illegible]. They stared, both of them, at Dick's grim face.

"Well?" Carmichael said tersely.

"I found him. He's dead."

Dick unrolled the cleaning cloth, [illegible] Luger pistol.

For a moment there was silence as all three stared at the weapon with its telltale marks.

Then M[illegible] said in a shaken, incredulous [illegible]

in a church, you know. And then we must look up Glynn's people and then, begins the real work, the hunting down of the murderer. You may go, Mr. Oakley, but be ready to come at once if [illegible]"

It was about 2 o'clock and I went to an inn for luncheon and then for a long walk before returning to my hotel.

The scene was indelibly photographed on my memory. Never could I forget that low-ceiled, dimly lit vault, with its broken monuments and its coffins, one holding the quiet, composed figure of a dead American.

And most amazing of all was the dead man's attitude.

Reaching the Terrace Garden Hotel, I saw at once that the news had spread.

"Oh, Mr. Oakley, what became of you? Where were you when we were driven out of the cathedral?"

"Have you heard about the murder? I think that Mr. Glynn was on the steamer with us coming over. Don't you remember the man who was everlastingly taking pictures?"

Of course I did! That was why the man in the coffin had seemed so oddly familiar to me. He had been on the steamer with us, and he had been everlastingly aiming his camera at everybody on board.

I turned to the girl who had thus enlightened me.

"Yes," I told her, "I do remember, and he is the man. I'm told he was from New Jersey."

There was just one man I could think of from whose conversation I could derive any profit, and that was John Clevedon. He, too, had been on the steamer coming over. Being a lover of detective fiction, I had noticed that Clevedon was of [illegible] Several times I asked the Library Steward for this or that book, only to be told that Mr. Clevedon was reading it.

It was not until the day we landed that, chancing to stand near him as we waited to disembark, I spoke to him of a volume he was carrying, a new and popular detective story.

"Yes," he had [illegible] enthusiastically, "it's great. One of the best. Have you read it?"

I had, and we discussed its fine points with eager interest until separated by the crowding passengers.

If Clevedon were really a detection enthusiast, [illegible] come some one with whom to discuss this very mysterious affair of the cathedral?

And so a few moments later I started off on the [illegible] and once there sent up my name.

The response was that I was to go to his rooms.

A [illegible] the summons to come in and I went.

Mr. [illegible] rose and met me with a smile.

"I remember you, Mr. Oakley," he said. "We crossed on the same boat—"

"Yes," I said eagerly, "and you remember we had a most interesting conversation just before we landed, about detective stories."

"Indeed, I do remember. Now, sit down, and let's chat. I can't offer you my hand for I've had a bad accident."

I had noticed the bandages as I entered, but I saw now that the matter must be serious, for the hand is in splints and the arm in a sling.

"What happened?" I asked, in [illegible] sympathy.

"My own stupidity," he said, with a rueful smile. "Awful hot last night, you know, and I had an electric fan going. [illegible] and I reached out of bed to turn the thing off, and—well, never mind details,— but somehow my forefinger got in the way and—[illegible]"

"You've heard of the murder in the crypt?" I asked.

"Yes, I read of it. Wonderful [illegible] the crime in the cathedral. How's that?"

"That's why I'm here. I noticed on board ship that you read detective stories continually, and I wondered if you had what is known as the detective instinct. I never quite dared come and ask you, until this thing happened, and then I concluded to take a chance on your amiability and come over to call."

"I'm [illegible] glad you did. I'm very fond of [illegible] yarns and [illegible] the time. [illegible] treated and by a new [illegible]. The doctor promises that I shall soon see all right, and not have to wear these glasses any more."

"Fine," I said, glancing at the glasses Clevedon had on.

"Now, tell me all about the crime."

I told him the whole tale of my going down into the crypt, of my finding the dead man there, and all the occurrences afterward.

"Well, I wish we could get the wretch who did old Warren in. I knew him fairly well, you see."

"You knew Glynn?"

"Yes. Not intimately at all, but [illegible] in our liking of old books."

"Old books!" I cried. "That's my hobby. Detective stories I read for recreation, but old books are really my life work. [illegible]"

"What a [illegible]"

[illegible]

At the same moment the [illegible] arrived and entered the room without knocking, [illegible]

When the [illegible] round [illegible] chair with a [illegible]

"Been a friend of [illegible] long?" he asked as he walked away.

"An hour or two," I answered, and he laughed. "We met a few moments on the steamer, coming over, and I made him a call this evening."

"To get him all messed up with this murder business, I'll wager. Now, look here, young sir, you go ahead on that wild goose chase as [illegible] as you like, but don't drag Clevedon into it."

"Why not?" I asked in astonishment.

"Only because with his excitable temperament and idle time on his hands, he'd be liable to go into it so [illegible] and [illegible] up to boiling point, get excited [illegible] perhaps [illegible] a physical [illegible] and raise the devil with it at [illegible]"

"Of course, I've no right to [illegible] but as [illegible] under my care I have a right to [illegible] John Clevedon's movements [illegible] and I [illegible] do so."

"Will he [illegible]?"

Mass. Child Wouldn't Eat

"Everybody in the neighborhood was crazy about Dorothy. She was the happiest, brightest little thing you ever saw," says her mother, Mrs. N. W. Harris, 11 Washington [illegible] "She looked so [illegible] we thought she'd never have any trouble. But she began to be [illegible]. It made her fretful [illegible] feverish. Her breath got to be terrible and her tongue was [illegible] coated. She [illegible] but lie [illegible]. She wouldn't eat and was losing weight fast.

[illegible] our doctor recommended California Fig Syrup and I began giving it to Dorothy. It brightened her [illegible] away. She began to eat [illegible] and her stomach and bowels started acting perfectly. Soon she commenced gaining weight [illegible] and she's been perfectly well, strong and happy ever since."

California Fig Syrup is made from [illegible] Nature's greatest laxatives—[illegible] First Quality Senna Leaves. Children like its rich, fruity taste. It regulates their stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

The genuine, endorsed by physicians for over 50 years, always bears the word "California." All drug stores have it.

GOOD MORNING, MISTER. ZIP, ZIP, ZIP!

This week we continue our national broadcast of "The Beetle, or the Drunkard's Children," as etched by Mr. Cruikshank. Plate VII shows a deplorable situation. Little Willebramit, lower right, has a toothache. Mama and papa fight over the bottle, both, of course, being anxious to see what is good for the toothache. The bottle falls to the floor and breaks. Its contents drip down from apartment to apartment. The neighbors rush thereby in and find that mamma has fainted from grief. Then papa resorts to profanity and is arrested for impersonating a traffic officer.

MERELY THE BAER FACTS

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THE war to end war started a new one in the Senate.

Thirty-five Senators went into a huddle and refused to come out.

Senator Bingham started a round robin in the middle of the huddle.

The round robin laid an egg.

Senator Bingham picked up the egg.

And ran the wrong way.

The multi-lateral treaty was finally annexed by a slab-sided score of 35 to 1.

The only man voting against the grain was Senator Blaine.

Senator Blaine is a Wisconsin Republican, subject to change without notice.

Four Democratic Senators were absent, which agrees thoroughly with the policies of the next administration.

When Senator Grump signed the document he said:

"Well, there goes another piece of beautiful lace for the hope chest."

Senator Squeebo of Indian Territory remarked, as he dashed along the dots on the line:

"I am the gold-star grandmother of the next good-will ambassador."

Senator Imppie, who shares his seat with an investigating committee, was optimistic. He said:

"This multi-lateral treaty will finish up more lateral than multi."

Senator Lobo also signed the treaty which will make peace compulsory. He said:

"Why not? I borrowed the pen, the ink was free and Borah had the floor."

Senator Dabb was the 82d man to sign the circular letter. He said:

"I am voting for peace today. Tomorrow I will vote for those fifteen cruisers."

"The man who said you can't blow hot and cold in the same breath never drank the stuff they sell in my State."

Most of the Senators who signed the Kellogg-Briand catalogue will also vote for 15 cruisers.

As Senator Whank remarked:

"We have left the army and joined the navy."

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

ADJUSTER TACTICS RAPPED ON AUTO INSURANCE

NEW LAW IS URGED AS JUST

How agents of insurance companies endeavor to take advantage of the poor and needy under the present compulsory insurance law, by trying to persuade them into settling genuine claims for a pittance, is shown in the case of a Dorchester widow, whose young son was nearly killed by a taxi.

In this case, which has just been brought to the attention of the Boston Evening American, the insurance company tried to settle the claim in question for $100, although the injured child was in a hospital five weeks and is disfigured for life.

The adjuster declared, the woman says, that the $100 he offered as a settlement would "buy a lot of new clothes" for herself and two young children, and urged her to accept for that reason.

Frank A. Goodwin, former State registrar of motor vehicles, contends that, not only are hundreds of fake claims settled by the insurance companies, but many legitimate claims, such as that of the Dorchester widow's child are improperly settled to the disadvantage of those injured.

These settlements will be done away with if the bill introduced in the Massachusetts Legislature by former Registrar Goodwin and the Boston Evening American, to establish a State fund to supply compulsory automobile insurance at cost, becomes law.

Claimants will get a square deal if their children are injured, instead of being asked to settle for a fraction of the real value of their claims.

A fair deal will be given because the fund will be administered by three disinterested State fund commissioners.

Mrs. Annie Simonson of 1121 Dorchester ave., Dorchester, is a widow with two children, Marion, five, and Albert, 11. She receives mother's aid from the city of Boston, being unable to work.

Here is Mrs. Simonson's story:

"My 11-year-old son, Albert, was knocked down by a taxi in Dorchester ave., near St. William's Church, last May, when the taxi darted around another automobile. Albert was with two other young boys at the time.

"My boy was removed to the office of Dr. Ignatius Craig nearby and removed later to Harley Hospital, a private institution, in Windemere rd.

"My son was in that hospital five weeks. He was unconscious the first night and I thought he was going to die; in fact, we all did. It was thought his skull was fractured.

"His other injuries included a broken thumb of the right hand and numerous cuts and bruises. I wanted him removed to City Hospital, but they insisted on him staying there. He was in a private room at first, but later I was told the insurance company wouldn't stand for that expense, and so he was removed to a ward.

REFUSED OFFER

"While he was in the hospital an insurance adjuster came to my home and talked to me about the accident. Shortly after my son came home from the hospital the same adjuster came to my home again and offered me $100 in settlement. He told me that a hundred dollars would buy a lot of nice clothes for myself and my wo children. I didn't fall for that, however.

"My boy was still under Dr. Craig's care when the insurance adjuster made the offer of $100 to settle the case. The adjuster told me that there was no liability. He said my boy was to blame for the accident. He called another time and made me the same offer of $100. I refused each time.

"His fourth call was made a week ago. He then offered $250 to $300, and said the insurance company would also pay the doctors' bills of $155 and $175, and the hospital bill of $105.60.

"I employed a lawyer, and he told me a few days ago the insurance company had made an offer of $600 cash to settle the case, and that all the doctors' and hospital bills must come out of that, as well as his own bill of $100, which would leave me $65.

URGES NEW LAW

"Just think of it, $65, after all the agony I suffered in believing my little son was going to die, as well as all the suffering he went through. He has headaches and dizzy spells as a result of the accident and his thumb is crippled so he cannot bend it. He cannot tie his shoe laces, even.

"I hope the bill of former Registrar Goodwin and the Boston American is passed by the Legislature, because I am sure poor widows like myself will get a fair deal if a state commission adjusts these claims."

The law proposed by former Registrar Goodwin and the Boston American would give just compensation. It would wipe out fake claims and pay the money out where it belongs. Under the proposed law a state fund of $12,367,804 would be established to care for all injuries and deaths caused by accidents in Massachusetts.

A flat rate of $16 on every passenger car would be charged at the time of registration, the certificate of registration serving as an insurance policy. The rate for trucks would be $25, while $50 would be charged for buses, rental cars and taxis.

Massachusetts motorists will pay private insurance companies $20,000,000 this year for compulsory automobile insurance, which means that if the Goodwin-American bill were law now, a saving of $7,500,000 would accrue to motorists in this state this year. Of this amount $3,000,000 would be in commissions to insurance agents.

Is your auto insurance costing you too much? Ought the law to compel you to furnish profits to private companies? Do the present zone rates seem fair to you?

Would you like the overhead cut from compulsory insurance?

Would you like to get your insurance and registration at one counter, at one time, and for one price?

If so, sign the accompanying petition:

Petition to Legislature to Pass Auto Insurance Bill

I am a citizen of Massachusetts and sign this petition to the Legislature to pass the new compulsory auto insurance bill proposed by Frank A. Goodwin and endorsed by the Boston Evening American.

O. HENRY STORY IN BIG FILM AT TWIN HOUSES

By LEO GAFFNEY

The forward march of the speaking cinema takes a swift grasshopper jump in the right direction with "In Old Arizona," at the Modern and Beacon. It is touted as the first dialogue picture to be made out-of-doors, but that is not what you might call its best talking-point. Sound or no sound, here is a grand movie of the old West, brilliantly set forth and fully as impressive as "The Covered Wagon." An O. Henry story, the one about the slippery Cisco Kid, supplies a perfect little plot; Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe and Dorothy Burgess are the trio of principals; Raoul Walsh and Irving Cummings are credited with the direction.

Warner Baxter

The film is full of surprises. Chief of these is Warner Baxter. His performance of the Cisco Kid, that dangerous, sentimental, Quixotic stick-up artist, will be a revelation to those who have watched Mr. Baxter in his recent succession of preposterous assignments. The late Holbrook Blinn was the only better Bad Man we have ever seen.

ENDING UNCHANGED

Another surprise. The original O. Henry ending is used. No attempt made to sentimentalize it, no attempt to fling in a moral. Watch for this ending; they don't make many of 'em that way.

More surprises. No "love interest" as such. Edmund Lowe as the Cavalry Sergeant is no noble hero, and Dorothy Burgess, the "girl," no better. The Sergeant is just a "cheap skate" ex-Boweryite, and the girl a combination of Carmen and Salome, retaining the worst features of each.

Mr. Lowe betters his performance in "What Price Glory" and will profit with the fans accordingly. Miss Burgess, to the contrary, gives such a striking portraiture of the vicious little wench that it looks too much like the real thing to win much favor with the mob.

VOICE IS BEST

The quality of sounds in "Arizona" varies. Some help out a great deal, like the rusty screech of the creaking pump handle, but thre are others that are as unnecessary as they are inept.

Mr. Baxter's voice is best, his diction clear, his dialect excellent.

Will Repeat the 'America' Symphony

The 14th regular pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will mark the return of Koussevitzky after two week's rest, will take place in Symphony Hall, next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Koussevitzky will then repeat Ernest Bloch's Epic Rhapsody, "America," which had its first performance here several months ago. This prize winning composition, which has now been played all over the United States is dedicated to Abraham Lincoln and Walt Whitman, and follows the growth of this country from the day of the Indians and early settlers, through the Civil War, to the present jazz age; finally looking towards a more ideal future, and culminating in a hymn to America. The hymn will be sung as before by a chorus—the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club.

Stage Stars to Aid Elks' Charity Ball

For the annual charity ball of Boston Lodge of Elks, scheduled for Monday evening, February 11, the committee has already arranged an elaborate program, which includes a concert from 8 to 9, followed by dancing.

A large number of theatrical and vaudeville stars have volunteered their services and will appear at various intervals during the dancing period. Another big feature of the evening will be the 11 o'clock toast. The entire proceeds of the occasion will be set aside for charity purposes.

PIANIST SCORES TRIUMPH IN HUB CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

Walter Gieseking, who gave a piano recital at Symphony Hall before a large and enthusiastic audience, is such a master of his art and his instrument, that when once you have heard him and set down your impression, it becomes difficult to say anything worthwhile a second time.

We have come to expect from Gieseking, as we do from Heifetz on the violin, perfection. We were not disappointed on this last occasion. But while a poor performance may furnish good material for a concert review, such a masterly job as Gieseking's makes the function of reviewing seem very puny indeed.

We can only repeat some of our previous utterances about him—his astonishing intellectual sweep, his broad, catholic tastes which make him as sympathetic an interpreter of ancients and moderns as of romantics; his amazing delicacy of touch at one moment and heroic power at another; his limitless technical mastery of his instrument.

These things were in evidence in a program that began with Bach's second Partita in C minor, superbly set forth, and ended with four modern compositions, rendered as if by a specialist in the particular style. In between were three sonatas by Scarlatti, the glitter and polished perfection of which Gieseking displayed to a nicety. There was a posthumous sonata in B-flat major by Schubert, of almost heroic lengths; music sometimes charming, sometimes the lyrical outpouring of Schubert when he was most representative; sometimes dull and workaday. For Gieseking it was apparently a labor of love.

Two Intermezzi by Brahms and Chopin's A-flat major Ballade were the other numbers. And here we heard romantic music played with the warm surge of emotion, the heaven-storming intensity that you get from, say, Paderewski at his best. When I heard Paderewski play the Chopin Ballade about six years ago I thought the last word had been said on the subject. Yesterday Gieseking made me change my mind.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO FLU

Coughs from Flu May Weaken Your System and Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion may help you avoid flu, but is not sold as a flu remedy. If you have fever, or think you may have the flu, see your doctor immediately. (adv.)

CREOMULSION
FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

YOU CAN BREAK THE LAXATIVE HABIT

This constant taking of laxatives, this drugging of the bowels and the inevitable weakening of the muscles isn't necessary. It can be stopped—stopped effectively—stopped with Thalax.

Thalax brings prompt relief from constipation. But it does so without forming the habit of constantly dosing to keep the bowels working. Instead, Thalax aims to break the medicine taking habit. For it gradually strengthens the bowel muscles and restores their natural action. With the result that after a reasonable length of time, you should need no more medicine, except in rare emergencies.

If you suffer from constipation do at least try Thalax. A tablet or two at night will bring the desired relief in the morning—without griping or distress. Continue Thalax at intervals until your movements become normal, then you won't need to continue taking it, for the improved condition will last.

Thalax is found at leading druggists. Bottle of 30 tablets 35 cents. If your druggist hasn't it in stock, send direct to K. A. Hughes Company, Boston, Mass.

RADIO BRINGS CLASSICAL WORKS

By FRED TOYE

THE MUSIC ROOM String Quintet will play the allegro movements from quintets by Faure, Schumann and Mozart on the Columbia Chain at 8 tonight. In addition to the String Ensemble, vocal soloists will be heard in such numbers as Hugo Wolf's "Weyla's Song," Mozart's "Allelujah" and Schumann's "Two Grenadiers."

The complete program:

Allegro from Quintet No. 2 in C Minor, Faure; "Weyla's Song," Hugo Wolf, contralto solo; "Piece en Forme de Habanera," Ravel, 'cello and piano; "Allegro Brillante" from Quintet, Opus 44, Schumann; "Allelujah," Mozart, soprano solo; "Die Beden Grenadiere," Schumann, baritone solo; Allegro from Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, Mozart.

TENOR SOLOIST

THE VOICE of Firestone will be heard over 42 stations associated with the National Broadcasting Company, including WEEI, at 8 o'clock. Franklyn Baur will be featured in three solo numbers, including Hardelot's "Because," for which numerous requests have been made. The program includes "March of the Musketeers," Friml, orchestra and choristers; "Because," d'Hardelot, Franklyn Baur; "Badinage," Herbert, orchestra; "Blue Shadows," from "Vanities," Alter, orchestra; "Angela Mia," Rapee, Vaughn de Leath; "Dusky Stevedore," from "Vanities," Johnson, orchestra; "On Wings of Song," Mendelssohn, concert orchestra, "I Loved You Then As I Love You Now," Axt, Franklyn Baur; "Diane," Rapee, orchestra; "Do You Know My Garden?" Haydn-Wood, Franklyn Baur; Selection from "Golden Dawn," Kalman ensemble.

POPULAR ABROAD

"THE DAUGHTER of Madame Angot" will be sung by the United Light Opera Company over stations of the Columbia system, at 10 o'clock. This opera, written by Charles Lecocq, is in three acts, and was first produced in Brussels in 1872, where it ran for 500 nights.

RADIO RIB TICKLERS

WLAC—This one came over the air all the way from Nashville, Tenn., to draw a laugh from J. P. Salisbury of Providence:

"Do you peek through that keyhole, Johnny, when I am calling on your sister?"

"Oh, no. That's mother's."

WLEX—Gertrude Campbell of Woburn thinks this is a snappy one:

He—"Would you accept a pet monkey?"

She—"Oh, this is so sudden. I'll have to ask father."

Send in to the Boston Evening American Radio Department the best jokes and amusing incidents which you hear over the radio. For every contribution printed, a prize of one dollar will be sent to the writer.

Lincoln Train Pilot Dying

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 21 (AP)—The man who was at the throttle of the locomotive which pulled the funeral train of President Lincoln is close to death. He is A. J. Wemple, 95, said to be America's oldest engineer. He has suffered heart attack.

FAY AND GARY IN NEW FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1929, Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 21—Again Gary Cooper and Fay Wray will be co-starred, this time it is "Golowin," Jacob Wasserman's novel, originally purchased for Herr Jannings in the golden days before talkies reigned supreme.

Wonder whose idea it is to make "glorious sweethearts" out of the strong, silent Cooper and the pale, mouse-like Miss Wray? These two certainly are not the romantic conception of Abelard and Eloise nor of Romeo and Juliet. In plain words, they do not seem to belong together.

I am curious to know if the public shares the belief or if the patrons of the theater look upon Cooper and Miss Wray as another Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky. Will my readers please answer?

Whether you or I or the world approve, the fact remains Cooper and Miss Wray begin work on "Golowin" immediately under the direction of Lothar Mendes. Wallace Beery and William Paul have the other important roles and Oliver H. P. Garrett is writing the adaptation.

ALAN DWAN who has been parking the megaphone on the United Artists lot where he directed Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask" is now due at the Fox Studio. His engagement with Winfield Sheehan calls for the direction of "The Far Call"—by Addison Marshall and it is to be one of Fox's most special specials. No so long ago Alan was permanently associated with Fox and he made some four or five productions. Then came a break and he moved elsewhere. Now he is back again, proving that a good man can always come back.

WHEN a guy has an option he never knows just how he stands. It may be exercised and then again it may not. That is why George K. Arthur can be sure that he stands well with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for Louis B. Mayer has taken up his option and now he is set with M-G-M for sometime to come. "China-Bound" is his next picture.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: James Atherton Starr refusing to pose for photographs without a Barrymore collar. The Roneys keeping open house at the Roosevelt Hotel. Darryl Zanuck hopping off for Palm Springs in a new plane. Camilla Horn lunching at the Montmartre with her husband.

Gary Cooper giving the girls along Hollywood boulevard a treat by driving down the street in a new car. Ray Griffith in familiar high hat and cane once again in movie makeup on the Fox lot. That's all today. See you tomorrow?

'RILEY THE COP' AT SCOLLAY

John Ford's Fox Films production, "Riley the Cop," now at the Scollay, brings Farrell Macdonald before the public in his first starring role. In the cast with Macdonald is the inimitable Louise Fazenda, Nancy Drexel and David Rollins have the leading romantic roles.

Louise Fazenda.

As in all Ford productions, "Riley the Cop" is conspicuous for deft touches. It is a smooth running picture, with innumerable comedy flashes between Macdonald and Miss Fazenda, particularly in Paris and Munich, where much of the action centers.

Macdonald, rated the best-natured "cop" in New York, seldom makes a "pinch." He is known as the stationhouse philosopher. He quells minor difficulties with a wave of his hand and a bland smile.

When he is sent abroad to bring back a prisoner, however, Macdonald, as Riley, breaks his pledge of 10 years. He gets hilariously "loaded" when he meets the fair Lena, otherwise Miss Fazenda, in a Munich beer garden. It is then that young Rollins, the prisoner, finds his own job cut out for him. He must escort the "copper" back to America! From this unique situation arises some of the most engaging comedy ever seen.

FLIGHTS and FLIERS

by George W. Hamblin

The dangers of ice-formation on an airplane was demonstrated by Lieut. Adolph M. Backstrom, chief student instructor of the Boston Airport Corp., last week. Backstrom took Fred Ames' whirlwind-motored Travel Air up for an hour's test, and hopped off with a light mist falling and the temperature about 35 degrees.

Climbing up to the ceiling, 1000 feet, Beckstrom flew around and around, staying right near the airport at all times. H. E. Wallis, chief of maintenance of the company, stood on the ground and wondered how soon the dreaded ice would begin to form. "Logginess" started in half an hour.

Finally the ice got the upper hand, and Backstrom decided to come down before he was forced to descend in some out-of-the-way place. The airport "gang" spent a half hour inspecting the ice, and A. D. Ross, the weather man on the airport, delivered a lecture on ice formation right on the spot.

Lieut. Backstrom soloed two students during the week. I. Thomas Williams and William E. Martin were the boys who qualified to take a ship up all by themselves.

Val Chick, president of Sunset Airways, made two trips down to his home in Gloucester, landing on the beach down there. Chick has 100 hours in the air and does a beautiful job every time he lands on the beach.

Harold Christensen, chief pilot for Sunset, spent nine hours in the air hopping passengers. George Barry is the field manager.

George Watkins, chief pilot for Bay State Flying Service, returned from a holiday visit to Nova Scotia. Watkins has been trying to arrange a trip down to Florida in a cabin job, but has not been able to make connections. The mild weather of Saturday nearly changed his mind.

Robert Andreani, Tech student and a solo student of Skyways, is piling up time in the Monocoupe. Most of the boys refuse to fly this little ship, but Andreani likes it and seems to get away with batting around in it.

Capt. Harry W. Lyon went down to Scituate last Friday afternoon to inspect some of the beaches down that way with the idea of selecting one for his take-off on his proposed Atlantic flight this spring.

In addition to the loneliness that the burning of a Challenger caused Charlie Emerson, one of the Skyways pilots, it caused Tom Goldie much unhappiness. Goldie was down at Wareham with Charlie and the Whoopee all summer, and kept it going in great shape. Now the old ship is gone, and Tom has an empty feeling.

Skyways, Inc., Portland airport is coming along in good shape, even confounding critics who said it was foolish to fly up there during the winter and expect to make money.

Olcott Payson, one of the company's directors, is managing the job, and has added four new students to his list, making a total of 14.

His brother, John, ex-army pilot, is putting in a lot of solo time, as is Halsey Gulick, who was soloed by the Curtiss Flying Service last summer.

Dick Holihan flew the Warner Challenger back from Hagerstown last Sunday, making the trip in 4½ hours. Dick froze his face quite severely during the trip, but has recovered completely, and is flying again.

Cross-country flights were made to Worcester and Lowell by Crocker Snow. The Bellanca was used for the trips.

The Beacon Air Service, Johnnie and Walter O'Toole, of Beachmont, will prepare the first Moth manufactured at Lowell for the New York Aviation Show.

Skyways has an order placed for two of the ships, and will use them for student instruction, both at Boston and Wareham during the coming summer.

THE QUESTION BOX

(Questions pertaining to aviation will be answered in this column every Monday. Address your queries to "Flights and Fliers," Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.)

Q.—Is there an airport on Martha's Vineyard? If so, where?

A.—Yes, there is an airport on the Vineyard, and a good one, too. It was operated by Eddie O'Toole and his Associated Aircraft last summer, and is located a couple of miles south of Edgartown.

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

these columns, that at the very moment Mr. Briand, foreign minister of France, was signing the Kellogg peace pact with his left hand he was signing with the other hand the treaty with England, providing for an increase in the naval establishment of both France and England and permitting an enormous military establishment at the command of France of over eight million men.

The insincerity of the European attitude towards the United States was further revealed by the fact that in this secret treaty between England and France it was proposed to induce the United States further to limit its naval requirements while both England and France were increasing their armaments.

In fact, while apparently acceding to the Kellogg peace proposals, these European nations were merely taking advantage of the United States' desire for peace to put this country in a defenseless position while they increased their forces of aggression, because, as Dean Inge, English exponent of Christ's brotherly love, so frankly and fraternally says:

"It is more than possible that the nations of Europe, enraged by the bloated prosperity and airs of superiority of 'The man who won the war,' will combine to draw Shylock's teeth."

It would seem in the face of these hard facts that even the most watery-eyed sentimentalists in all the United States would realize that a compact with European nations which is even a "feeble imitation of the League of Nations" is fraught with danger and that the peace professions of war-like European nations are only made as a screen for increased armament. And would realize, too, that for this nation to depend upon open peace pacts with nations which are at the same moment making secret war pacts is merely for the lamb to trust itself to the mercy of the wolves.

But the sentimentalists never realize anything practical. It has been said of all of us that we learn nothing from history except that we learn nothing from history. But the sentimentalists learn nothing from facts either past or present.

They are perfectly good people, exceedingly soft hearted as well as soft headed, but they are constitutionally and chronically committed to meddling in other people's affairs as a national, international and individual policy.

Their program of PEACE is so completely to entangle the United States in European complications that the nation will surely be involved in the next European WAR.

For it may be set down as a proposition, self- evident to all people familiar with the facts and accessible to their logic, that entangling the United States with Europe will NOT draw European nations into the paths of peace pursued by the United States, but WILL inevitably draw the United States into the practices and processes of intrigue and war habitually pursued by European nations.

The purposes of the sentimentalists are undoubtedly good. But their methods are exactly the kind which involved this country in the late European war, and their policies and practices are exactly those which George Washington in his wisdom warned the people of this country to avoid.

But in addition to the impractical sentimentalists, who are innocently and ignorantly urging the United States into European complications, there are very practical and unsentimental forces which are impelling the nation in the same direction and these forces are operating neither innocently nor ignorantly.

Chief among these other influences are the international bankers who make their fortunes out of the commissions they receive for obtaining benefits for foreign nations from the people or the government of the United States.

Involving the United States in foreign complications is the stock in trade of these bankers because out of these complications come the loans and subsidies, the privileges and purchases from which the commissions of these bankers are derived.

If this statement is considered in the least exaggerated, the attention of the reader is directed to the letters of President Wilson's Ambassador to England, Walter Hines Page, who relates in detail exactly how the House of Morgan received ten per cent on all purchases made by England in this country during the World War, and how the total of these commissions amounted to four hundred million dollars.

It is not stated or intimated here that the international bankers promote war, but merely that they do promote the conditions and complications out of which war so often issues, and furthermore, that those complications are obviously not unprofitable to international bankers who are the agents of foreign powers.

It is obvious, too, in the light of the inside history of war finance which Mr. Page reveals, that it is the plain people who make the sacrifices in war and the high financiers who make the money.

The intervals between wars do not bring in so much money to the vaults of the international bankers, but still the very practical unsentimentalists of business have enough money on hand to finance expeditions of impractical sentimentalists, perennial busybodies and chronic and constitutional meddlers, and these expeditions descend on Washington in platoons and give our alert statesmen the excuse to do what the international bankers want them to do; and to deserve the millions of dollars of campaign contributions which the international bankers so liberally bestow.

Of course, you sensible and patriotic American citizens have voted overwhelmingly against foreign entanglements in four consecutive presidential elections, and you have voted against the League of Nations, and the more or less feeble imitations of the League of Nations, and you have voted against the World Court, and voted out of office nearly all the Senators who voted for the World Court.

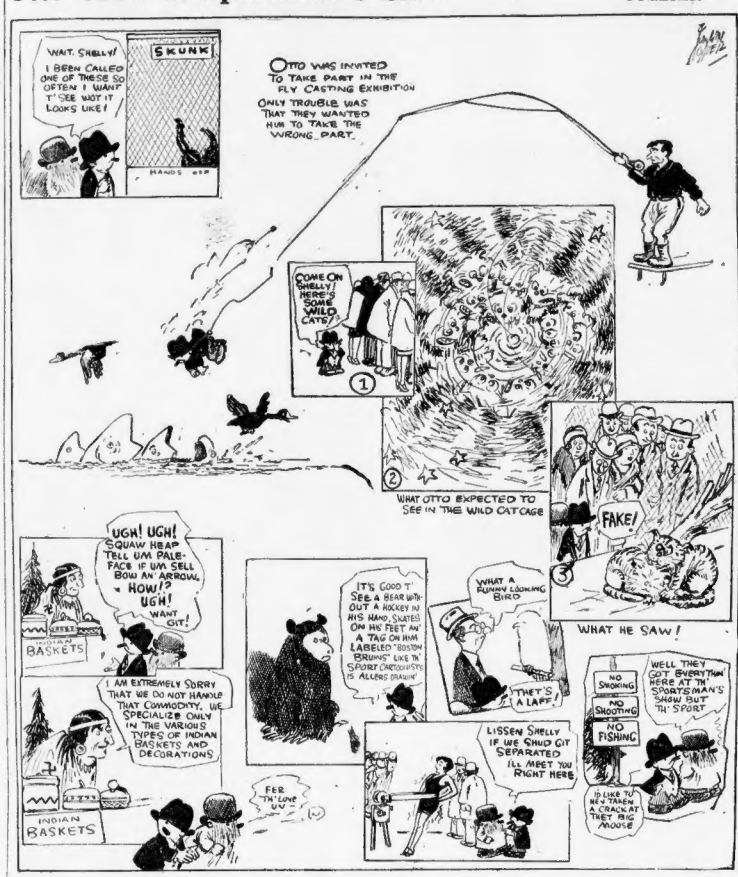

You have done your duty, and everything would be all right and we would be safely free from possible entanglements in European wars if you only had something to say about your government. But you haven't.

You have something to say about elections, of course, but between elections the government is run by the impractical sentimentalists and the very practical unsentimentalists of big business.

By HELEN ROWLAND.

MY Daughter, every damsel must choose whether she shall adorn a pedestal and receive a man's admiration, or relax upon a footstool and receive his attentions.

For, lo, in theory, a man admireth dignity in woman. But the one whose doorbell he ringeth most often is she that greeteth him with all the dignity of a playful puppy.

For when he seeketh a playmate, he yearneth not for a statue, but for something that will unbend and romp around and put him at his EASE.

Likewise, theoretically, a man admireth reserve in a woman. Yet the damsel whose hearth he adorneth most often is she that welcometh him with all the reserve of a friendly fox terrier and maketh him feel at home.

Academically, a man admireth a brilliant intellect in a woman. But she whose telephone number he taketh down most carefully is the one who talketh with her EYES and listeneth eloquently with her ears.

Go to. A man admireth orderliness and neatness and domestic efficiency in woman. Yet she in whose company he longeth to spend a restful evening is the careless person who permitteth him to lounge upon her sofa cushions, and is not fussy concerning where he putteth his feet or flingeth his cigarette ashes.

Likewise a man admireth a woman with all the strength of her moral conviction. But she to whom he goeth for consolation in his hours of trouble, and to whom he always returneth, is the woman who can smile and forgive, and who heareneth unto his weakest alibis with a relenting eye and a melting heart.

Yet, verily, a man admireth a fearless and capable damsel, who can tramp beside him upon the long and arduous hike and help him stake a tent or bait a hook without fainting.

Yet she whom he inviteth to walk beside him to the altar is the tender and clinging soul who teetereth upon foolish French heels, stoppeth her ears at the firing of a gun and runneth at sight of a garter-snake. For she needeth a strong man's "protection." She awakeneth all his chivalry and appealeth to his vanity!

Then, take the choice, my Daughter, whether thou wilt have a man's respect or his devotion; his homage or his confidences; his admiration or his attentions. For, alas, a man seldom beateweth both a baby and a wedding ring upon the same woman!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"I'M just drifting," she cried, "nothing seems to matter."

You've cried that, too—haven't you? This letter will seem like a letter from your own secret life:

Dear Miss Robinson:

Help me if you can. I am 22 years old and seem to have come to the stage where nothing matters any more. I have even lost interest in the man with whom I have been going for the past year. I am drifting—drifting—nothing pleases me—and I don't seem in care what the future holds. I don't go out very much—it doesn't seem worth the effort. I try to get enthusiastic over things, but can't even make a bluff at it. Please write something to knock me out of this state and I'll always remember you.

EDNA.

Drifting—

Every so often all lives come to that pass. Then we're terrified. We think that everything has stopped—that we're failures. But we're not.

It's natural for life to pause—life lies fallow between seasons.

The field is sown. The seeds sprout, sending their roots deep into the rich soil, sucking greedily the strength from the soil. Presently there is the abundant harvest. Then the earth lies bare under the autumn rain. The earth is tired. It has been temporarily exhausted, it has given of its stored strength. Now for some months it will rest and gradually, during that resting time, its strength will be restored. Human clay must also rest.

Rest is a part of the cycle of growth of a man as well as of a field.

We have our seed time and harvests. We receive impressions as afield receives seeds. And presently life rises to a harvest time. Then the tide of growth recedes. We can receive no more impressions—we can bear no more fruit—we must lie fallow until we are ready for another period of growth.

It is as necessary to rest properly as it is to properly.

Learn how to lie fallow.

When next your life fails into a "drifting" period do not be frightened or discouraged or rebellious. Accept that season quietly. Forget your own progress for a while—your own self. Open the soul of your spirit to the sun and the wind and rain and the stars of experience—letting all that happens have its way with you, but not trying to happen yourself.

Do not try to make decisions during a fallow time—do not fret or fuss. Be still! And presently you will feel life stir in you again and once more be ready for the spring.

What Do You Know?

BOSTON'S ORIGINAL KNOWLEDGE TEST

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Do you know:

1. Under whose reign did the first persecutions of Christians begin in Rome?
2. Who was the goddess of the morning?
3. Who was called the "Great Commoner?"
4. What celebrated cathedral has 10,000 statues?
5. What was the name of the village immortalized by Goldsmith in his "Deserted Village"?
6. Who was the husband of Becky Sharpe in Thackeray's "Vanity Fair"?
7. Who was Louis Capet?

Match opposites:

8. Sympathy. Antipathy .
9. Flexible. Irreducible.
10. Miraculous. Stiff.
11. Obedient. Rebellious.
12. Sublime. Natural.

Fill each blank:

13. "Pride and ——," by Austen.
14. "Jane ——," by Bronte.
15. "The Scarlet ——," by Hawthorne.

See tomorrow's paper to verify your results. Answers to Saturday's test:

1. Sumptuous. 2. Spectre. 3. Base. 4. Diminutive. 5. Unadorned. 6. Travels. 7. Mirth. 8. House. 9. Windsor. 10. Failed. 11. Apostle St. John. 12. Duke of Wellington. 13. Cassiopeia. 14. Mr. Crackle. 15. Ten.

Day by Day Abroad

O.O. McINTYRE

AT SEA—Just before starting with my wife, mother-in-law and dog to the pier to embark in the Ile de France for a short trip abroad, a slick gentleman tricked me into stopping on the way to make a movietone talk. They ran suddenly out of celebrities and decided to use me for one.

They'll be more careful after this. I not only gummed up a couple of reels trying to say "recalcitrant," but stood in the wrong spot twice and, blinded by the lights, was only saved from breaking my neck down an elevator shaft by the quick yank of a workman. And what he said!

So I was in no mood for a fidgety ocean. We had scarcely lifted anchor until it snapped into its dance—not a soft shoe affair but one of those old-fashioned hoe downs. In such trying moments, with doors slamming and port holes closing, one needs most of all a symbol of courage.

I rang for the steward. I needed nothing, but just wanted to see him shrug his shoulders and hear him say: "It is nothing, monsieur!" He turned out to be one of those plump, blonde, wine-cheeked Frenchmen with violet eyes and a thin piping tenor. A lot of help.

When he spoke I thought he had stepped on a kitten. He kept watching the door and I made up my mind if he made a dash to trip him. He would not beat me to a life boat. And then, like dawn in the movies, came the calm. There is only one interesting ocean trip and that is the first. Take it from one on his 10th crossing.

The rest have a rubber stamp monotony—the same tweedy pipe smokers, giggly flappers and lounging room bores. The minute you realize there is no turning back you would give your hope of Heaven to be home. But folk will be ridiculous and go abroad, so here we are.

It is amusing to watch people creep out on deck following a storm. Their manner is nonchalant—chirping like sparrows after a sudden shower. The seasoned voyageur knows they likely donned life belts and sat about in their cabins in white-faced terror while the waves rolled high. How I know!

THERE are two heroes aboard with their breasts cluttered up with so many medals Mr. Sousa would look naked. Adulation is always dangerous, and these lads are no exceptions. They came aboard with a heavy list and have been that way ever since. We are not indulgent with heroes any more. There are too many, and we want them sober. Either that or they must hide their medals. An East Indian prince, who looks like Otis Skinner, wearing a white robe and a diamond bracelet on each wrist, is in the cabin next door. I wonder if he tells fortunes.

NOTHING is quite so "mental" as sea sickness. In the Olympic one time I saw a man deliberately talk another into it. The victim was boasting of many crossings made without a tremor and his friend winked at the group about the table. I don't know what he said but when I passed by later everybody was convulsed with laughter and the immune fellow was galloping for the rail—the gray of a flounder's belly. And he did not show himself again.

OLD seagoing captains many years at the wheel are never entirely free from twinges of seasickness. And there are some people who actually cross the ocean solely to be ill. They believe it is a sort of panacea. I prefer castor oil raw.

AS one who has had his share of mals-de-mer, one thing is certain. Food never tastes as good as after an attack. The illness vanishes pouf—like that. One moment you think you are dying and hope you are, the next you are aching to tear into a three-inch steak with all the trimmings. There are no regrets either when you look back on "sickness" of all sickness. You do not mind having been a victim at all. If that were not true, liners would go into bankruptcy.

THE liveliest thing on the ship during the sway of the drunken wind was my pooch, who, in the plunging liner poised in mid air and shivered down, he ran joyously in circles, barking his head off. A wan and annoyed gent next door rapped twice, but he need not have been so fussy. He was making funny noises himself. Perhaps another way of making whoopee.

MEASURING LATITUDE

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"I follow your articles every night with the hope of finding something about how to find the latitude. I understand clearly how to find the longitude, but when it comes to the latitude I am stuck. I know that the sun is up to 23 degrees north in Summer and as far south in Winter, but suppose you are 40, 50 or 60 degrees north when the sun is perpendicular to the equator. How can you measure that? However, how many miles are in a degree of longitude when the latitude is 40, 50 or 60?—Joseph Dupre.

THE best way for you to measure your latitude approximately is by taking the height of the pole star above the horizon. That height equals the latitude of your place of observation. But the pole star revolves around the real pole at a distance of a little more than one degree, so that its height, or altitude, is a degree more than the latitude. If measured when the star is above the pole, and a degree less than the latitude when the star is below the pole. When the star is due east or west of the pole, in its 24-hour circuit, the altitude of the star equals the latitude without addition or subtraction.

You can tell roughly at any time what the position of the pole star is with respect to the pole, by observing the constellation of the Great Dipper. A line drawn from the middle star in the "handle" of the Great Dipper straight to the pole star passes over the true pole about one degree before it reaches the pole star. This will serve to tell whether the star is above or below or to one side or the other of the pole. For careful measurement of the latitude you must, of course, use instruments, and find out with the aid of the American Ephemeris (the astronomer's almanac), just what the situation of the pole star is at the moment of observation.

If you want to observe the sun for latitude you must first know its declination north or south of its equator. If it is just on the equator, as in your question, then its altitude at noon above your horizon, subtracted from 90 degrees, will give you your latitude.

But the best way to look at this is to start with the fact that the angular distance of the zenith (point overhead) from the equator, i. e., the declination of the zenith, is always equal to the latitude, just as is the height of the pole above the horizon. However, the Equator is not a visible object in the sky, and to ascertain its distance from the zenith at any point on the earth, you make your observations on the sun, which is never more than 23½ degrees in declination north or south of the Equator. The Ephemeris gives you the sun's declination on any date.

Now, suppose that you should find the sun on a certain day at noon 50 degrees above the horizon (i. e., the true horizon, such as you see at sea). Then its zenith distance must be 40 degrees, since the zenith is always 90 degrees from the horizon, and 90–50 equals 40. But on looking into the Ephemeris you find that the sun is on that day 20 degrees south of the Equator. Then, since the sun's observed distance from the zenith is 40 degrees, while at the same time it is 20 degrees below (south of) the Equator, the latter cannot be more than 40—20, i. e., 20 degrees from the zenith. But the distance between the zenith and the Equator, as measured at an place on the earth, is always equal to the latitude of that place. Hence your latitude is found to be 20 degrees north.
